STORNOWAY is a parish in the ISLAND of LEWIS, county of Ross—the town, which has greatly increased in importance of late years, is 65 miles N. from Portree (in Skye), and 60 from Poolewe (described in a preceding page). It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 7 min., and in west longitude 6 deg. 14 min. 10 sec., at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, considered one of the safest and most commodious harbours in North or even Great Britain; the entrance to it is north and north-by-west, and is easy of access to vessels of any burthen, at any time of the tide. A light-house stands on Arinsch point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights; another light-house has been built on the Butt of Lewis by the commissioners. The town is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre, and the streets run in direct lines; the houses are neat and well built, and being in general whitewashed, have a clean appearance. A most convenient quay, with slips and landing places, was constructed by public subscription. The stranger, on entering the bay, is forcibly struck with the imposing and magnificent appearance of Lewis Castle, in the Tudor and castellated style of architecture. It occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by its present proprietor, Sir James Matheson, M P. for Ross-shire, at an outlay of £60,000. The town, too, as seen on entering the bay, presents a pleasing aspect. From small origin, Stornoway has gradually risen to considerable importance, through the spirit and enterprise of its inhabitants: and these exertions have been effectually seconded by the present liberal proprietor; and the ample resources of this gentleman have been applied to promote both the agricultural and commercial value of the Lewis in general, and Stornoway in particular. Among the improvements accomplished, may be mentioned the draining of two thousand acres of moor or waste land: planting several hundred acres with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding the castle, pleasure grounds and walks were tastefully laid out, ponds sunk, and drives formed. One hundred miles of old roads were thoroughly repaired, and the same distance of new ways made in various directions. Twenty-one bridges were thrown across rivers and rapid streams, in different parts of the island; and in Stornoway a patent slip was constructed, at a cost of £7,000, which will draw up vessels of eight hundred tons burthen into dock, for the purpose of making repairs—a great advantage to the ship owners of Stornoway, and others visiting the port. The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which the salmon fishery is very productive. During the months of May, June and July is the season for herring fishing, when from eight to nine hundred boats, with a complement of five hands to each boat, are employed in the season through the island, and during those periods four hundred tons of fish, or more, have been exported; consisting chiefly of cod, ling and herring. The ling and cod are caught during the winter months, and are dried and forwarded to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets, and as many as 60,000 and 70,000 barrels of herrings have been exported in one year, chiefly to the Hamburg, Stettins and St. Petersburgh markets. We may in this place be allowed to state a fact, which, though at that time seemed interesting merely as a singular occurrence, involves considerations worthy of being entertained in a more important light, as creating, possibly at no distant period, another branch of marine pursuit upon our shores, that has hitherto been followed only in more distant seas, accompanied by extreme perils and privations—we allude to the whale fishery. On the morning of the 4th of July, of the year 1837, a shoal of several hundred of whales, of the bottle-nose species, came into the bay of Stornoway; the greatest bustle and activity was immediately manifested among the inhabitants—chase was instantly commenced upon these unusual visitors and, after an arduous and severe contest, twenty-eight of these leviathans of the deep were driven on shore. The writer of this article witnessed the opening of one of these enormous fish: in the paunch were found the remains of nine fine salmon, two of which, when alive, could not have weighed less than twenty pounds each, and they exhibited every appearance of having been swallowed whole, and several shoals have been successfully caught since the above mentioned period. Until of late a ropery and corn mill were the only manufactories Stornoway could boast of, to which, however, may now be added 'the Lewis Chemical Works,' where there is carried on a manufacture of paraffin oil from peat. The first process is carried on at a place called 'the Creed,' where peats are cut, and by a process of distillation, a kind of tar is extracted from the smoke. The tar is then carted a distance of six or seven miles to GARRABOST, where it undergoes another process, conducted by steam machinery, and ultimately paraffin oil and paraffin itself is produced. There are also lubricating oil and grease manufactured, the latter is used for coating ships' bottoms, and termed 'anti-fouling grease,' and has proved itself far superior to anything yet used for this purpose. This great undertaking originated with Sir James Matheson, for the purpose, if possible, of converting the large tracts of moss in the island to some useful purpose, and ultimately to cultivate the land when thus cleared. A large amount of money is embarked in this undertaking, but it is now in a fair way of being remunerative, and is a source of employment to a large number of people, there being at present about sixty men constantly employed, besides a large number who get employment in summer in cutting and drying the peats. The monetary transactions of the town are facilitated by branches of the National Bank of Scotland, and the City of Glasgow Bank, which have been established in this distant quarter for many years. There are likewise agents for Lloyds, and for several insurance companies, and three or four excellent inns—of the latter, the Caledonian, the Lewis, and the Commercial Hotels, may be considered as exceedingly eligible establishments for families, commercial gentlemen, or for posting. The town is supplied with gas and water by joint stock companies, munificently promoted by the great patron of the place.

Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. with the design of promoting the civilization of the western isles, and it has now adopted 'the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862.' A sheriff's court sits every Tuesday during sessions for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. In respect to edifices, ornamental in their architecture, the only buildings deserving notice are the Established, the Episcopal, the Free and United Presbyterian Churches, and a new building for the City of Glasgow and National Banks, and a commodious prison, erected in 1845, with a few private residences along the beach, of handsome exterior. Stornoway possesses several educational, religious and social institutions. The Free Church and General Assembly's Schools are very efficient establishments, conducted upon the plan of the Normal seminaries: there are also two schools for females: one instituted and endowed by the proprietor and his lady, affording a thorough English education to numerous pupils, and instruction in every description of needle work; having a department for Ayrshire needle-work alone—the materials of which are supplied by Glasgow houses, who pay the pupils for their work. There are several other schools, built and endowed by the same benevolent gentleman, in various parts of the island, and one founded by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge. The friendly society and incorporated trades' society (association for the support of the aged and infirm), are liberally supported by their respective benevolent members. The horticultural society is discontinued. The edifice erected for the service of a Masonic lodge is a handsome structure; in it are occasionally held assemblies, concerts and public meetings; in the same building is a newsroom and a public library.

The parish of Stornoway lies on the north-east of Lewis Island, bounded on the inland side by Barvas—it extends nineteen miles in length, by from four to seven in breadth. The surface is generally flat and moorish; the shores partly sand and partly rock, and are indented by a number of bays. In addition to the more immediate local improvements effected by the proprietor before, and so often mentioned, he has facilitated the means of communication between Lewis and Stornoway with distant parts. Steamers handsomely fitted up for passengers ply between Glasgow and Stornoway twice a week in summer, and once a week in winter. Persons also having to visit Stornoway can proceed from Edinburgh or Glasgow to Dingwall, by coach, to Loch Maree by mail car; from the latter point is a boat to Poolewe in winter once a week, and from Poolewe is a mail packet to Stornoway.

The most remarkable ancient remains in the island of Lewis or Lewis are the Druidical standing stones or temple of Callanish; they are forty-three in number, arranged in a cruciform manner, with a circle at the intersection from which the wings radiate, they extend north and south 600 feet with the line corresponding with the long leg of the cross. Sir James Matheson has enclosed the circle with a neat wire fence, and the ground about it cleared. On a lower eminence half a mile from the Callanish Temple, there is another cluster of standing stones. Throughout the island there are various specimens, single and in fours, of these standing obelisks, probably erected as memorials. At MEALISTA IN UIG not far from the shrine of St. Catan are the remains of a nunnery which has found no name in history, but is still designated by a Gaelic name commemorative of the abode of the sable sisterhood. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered a few years ago upwards of 60 ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently of very ancient manufacture, they were about four inches long, partly stained of a beetroot colour, and from their variety in form and shape were probably designed and shaped as chessmen.

POST OFFICE, STORNOWAY, Norman Morrison, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive twice a week in summer by steamers, arriving Wednesdays and Saturdays, but in winter there is only one steamer, arriving on Saturdays, and a sailing packet from Aultbea in Poolewe arriving on Tuesdays (weather permitting). Mondays and Wednesdays are the days of despatch from Stornoway.

TAIN,

ARDGAY, EDDERTON, KINCARDINE, FEARN, TARBAT, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TAIN is a parish, a royal burgh, and a market town. The latter 46 miles N. from Inverness, and 26 N. by E. from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Frith of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea several ferries are established, and near its head an iron bridge crosses it. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Baldnei, signifying 'the town of St. Duthac (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. The church, which was founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, and was an elegant structure, is now in a state of melancholy dilapidation. St. Duthac seems to have been a saint who enjoyed a considerable reputation in Scotland, in the 15th century, as tradition records that James IV. once made a pilgrimage on foot from Falkland, in Fife, to his shrine at the church of Tain, for the expiation of some offence. He travelled with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way, at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land, with other immunities. The inhabitants hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss within a few miles of the town, which is still called 'the King's Causeway.' A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built; but of late years it has received improvements and additions by the erection of many good houses and some buildings for public use—among the latter is a large modern edifice for assemblies and public meetings; a new Court house, surmounted by pinnacles, and presenting a handsome appearance; the churches, and the Royal Academy. The last named, which is agreeably situated in an open park at the west end of the town, and is a superior educational institution, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1812; the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription. The courses of education are conducted by a rector, with a classical master and assistants. The Court-house, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors; in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames; the new Court-house is erected on its site. The trade of Tain is of the usual character found in country towns where manufactures have not appeared. The most prominent branches are distilling, brewing, an iron foundry, and in the vicinity of the town a woollen mill. There are two banking houses established here—branches respectively of the British Linen Company, and of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. Seated almost on the shore of an arm of the sea, Tain has of late years improved very considerably with regard to shipping, a few shipowners being now resident in the town. As a royal burgh, it is govered by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and nine councillors; and unites with Cromarty and other contributory burghs (named under that town), in returning one member to parliament. Within the last eighteen months the Highland Railway, a branch of the Caledonian, has been extended to ARDGAY, in the parish of Kincardine, about fourteen miles beyond Tain, and one mile from Bonar Bridge, and steps are being taken to extend it on to Wick. A sheriff small debt court is held in Tain every Tuesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment; a Free Church—a handsome building erected in 1844; and an United Presbyterian Church. The first-mentioned edifice is of considerable dimensions—in form quadrangular, with a castellated tower at each corner, which, not rising above the main body of the building, renders the general appearance of the whole more massive than elegant. The parish of Tain extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Frith, by a breadth of 4 miles inland. The ground in general is flat, but, towards the west, rather hilly. The district is tolerably well wooded, much improved by agricultural operations, and, upon the whole, of a pleasing appearance. The sea shore is flat and sandy. The principal markets are held on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in July, on the Wednesday after the third Tuesday in August, and on the third Tuesday in October; and corn markets are held on every other Friday.

PORTMAHAMACK is a small sea-port and fishing village in the parish of TARBAT, 10 miles E. from Tain; situated on the north coast. The curing of fish during the season is carried on here very extensively.

EDDERTON is a parish, bounded on the north by Kincardine, on the south by Tain, on the east by the Frith of Dornoch, and on the west by Kilmuir: it is five miles long, by four miles broad.

ARDGAY is a village in the parish of KINCARDINE, and one mile from Bonar Bridge, situate on the north border of Ross-shire. It has a commodious inn, called the 'Balnagown Arms,' where every comfort will be found. A deed was granted in the year 1686, to erect the village into a burgh of barony, but the deed was never carried into effect.

ULLAPOOL,

LOCH BROOM, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ULLAPOOL is a seaport and fishing village in the parish of LOCH BROOM, 61 miles W. by N. from Inverness, 50 N.W. by W. from Dingwall, and 30 N.E. from Poolewe, situated on the west coast of Ross-shire, on the north side of an extensive islet of the sea, called Loch Broom; and it is overhung by a long rugged precipitous face of rock. It was begun to be built under the auspices of the British Fishery Society, in 1788, and has been gradually increasing since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay for the use of vessels, some of which sail regularly to Portree and Stornoway in Lewis. In Ullapool a very handsome hotel has been erected. The nearest railway station at present is at Dingwall. The chief trade of the place is the herring fishery, which is the main dependence of its inhabitants. Prodigious shoals of this fish appear off the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they pass on towards the south, and do not strike into the lochs and arms of the sea as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for, great preparations made, and considerable expense incurred by the poor people, to profit by their expected bounty. When the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season is attended from all parts of the east and west coast, and even from Ireland by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance.

The want of good roads in this district has been an inconvenience long felt by inhabitants of the circumjacent country. Within the last few years, Hugh Mackenzie, Esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, has opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of the Marchioness of Stafford, Sir James Matheson, Bart. M.P. being the feuer, he also has conferred great benefits on Stornaway, and other parts of the Lewis, by his spirited and costly improvements in roads, &c.: Ullapool may therefore look confidently forward to future days of prosperity under his fostering care.

The parish church was erected at the head of Loch Broom in 1844. There is a quoad sacra church with a district attached; it was erected into a parish quoad sacra in 1859. A Free church is also situated in the village. Schools are connected with each. The parochial school is eight miles from the village. A justice of peace court for the recovery of small debts is held occasionally in the village.

ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS county, which lies on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded by Northumberland on the east, Dumfries-shire on the south-west, by the county of Selkirk on the west, by Berwickshire on the north, and by Northumberland and part of Cumberland on the south. The figure of the county is extremely irregular: it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh, upwards of forty miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about thirty miles. The area of the shire has been variously estimated as containing six hundred and seventy-two, six hundred and ninety six, and seven hundred and twenty square miles of land; rather less than one-half is brought into cultivation. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Tiviotdale, being that division drained by the Tiviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 520 square miles. Liddisdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contain about 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 28 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in 'the Merse,' and comprehends 27 miles.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the time of the Christian epoch the western and greater part of Roxburghshire was inhabited by the Gadenii, while the eastern and lesser districts were occupied by the Otladinii, who had numerous strongholds in the shire—ruins and traces of which are still visible; the district is also intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and the whole shire presents a field of the greatest interest to the antiquary and the historian. There is another class of antiquities (the memorials of after ages) belonging to the county, worthy of notice and inspection—these are towers or castles; among them are the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh, Hermitage castle (in Liddesdale), and other similar structures of minor celebrity. The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose, and Kelso. From its situation on the confines of the two kingdoms, Roxburghshire suffered severely throughout the various border wars; few were so distinguished in the conflicts of the middle ages as the 'men of Tiviotdale,' many of whom followed David, in 1128, to 'the Battle of the Standard,' in which they fought by his side, and shared his misfortune. During these fierce aggressions, the marches of the kingdom were at different periods contracted and extended (this district being occasionally wholly or partly under English domination), till the year 1357, when the borders were finally settled as they then happened to lie; and by this arrangement Roxburghshire was for ever attached to Scotland.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—The southern parts of Roxburghshire are very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat; in many instances, however, the hilly grounds rise in beautiful swells from the rich valleys at their base: the aspect of the country is thus finely diversified in respect to surface and elevation, while the beauty of the district is greatly enhanced by the clear rivers and brooks poured through the different vales. The following are the principal mountains and eminences, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea: Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells, and Windhead Fell, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell 1,830; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberlaw, 1,490; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the country is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile: in some parts a rich loam prevails—in others, gravel and clay, in various proportions; the heavy clayey soil chiefly occupying the higher grounds, while the valued loam is generally found on low and level tracts, near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddisdale there is much mossy land: but for a country so mountainous, the proportion of heath and moss is inconsiderable. It has been ascertained that, so early as the twelfth century, the district produced great quantites of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress in the manufacture of grain. Under the intelligent monks, the agriculture of the county is known to have arrived at considerable perfection; and it is a matter of certainty that they introduced a knowledge of horticulture. In later times, Roxburghshire has kept pace with the other counties in those extraordinary improvements in the management of the soil, and the rearing of stock, for which Scotland in general is now distinguished. The mineralogy of the shire is neither valuable or varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770, coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the border of Northumberland; but, though wrought for some time, was ultimately abandoned as unprofitable; another seam was subequently found near the south-eastern point of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district; various attempts have been made to discover coal in different places in the county, but not one of them was conducted on a scale adequate to the importance of the object; the inhabitants are still supplied with this valuable fossil from Dumfries-shire, Lothian, or Northumberland. The manufactures of Roxburghshire are not extensive: if a staple of the county may be particularised, it is that of articles manufactured from wool, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, where flannels, blankets, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery, are extensively manufactured. The county contains many elegant mansions and beautiful seats: one of the most interesting of these is 'Abbotsford,' the seat of the late eminent novelist, Sir Walter Scott; it is a fine Gothic castle, the internal and external decorations of which, characterize it as having been the residence of the poet, the antiquary, and the man of superior and refined taste: but not to the mansion was the cultivated taste and judgment of the poet confined—he covered his extensive property with the most skilfully disposed and thriving plantations, and by his improvements induced others to contribute to ornament that beautiful portion of the valley of the Tweed.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal streams of Roxburgshire are beautiful and interesting, and their tributaries numerous. The noble Tweed enters the county near the influx of the Ettrick, winds through the fertile vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of thirty miles, receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Tiviot, and the Eden. The TIVIOT, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, is a lovely river; it passes through a vale to which it gives name, and, in a course of from thirty to forty miles, receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Keaile waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddal (or Liddle) rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of four or five miles forms the boundary with England: the streams tributary to the Liddal are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers have their origin in this county; after which they enter England, and fall into the sea at Tynemouth and Coquet Isle. The waters of Roxburghshire, while useful and ornamental to the country through which they glide, possess considerable interest with both the antiquary and the poet, from the associations connected with their streams; for, besides being frequently mentioned in the pages of history, they have elicited laudatory strains from the Scottish lyrists—among the rest those of the author of 'the Seasons.' The principal Railway line in connection with this county is the 'North British,' with its several branches.

The county of Roxburgh comprises thirty entire parishes, and five parts of parishes: it contains only one Royal Burgh—JEDBURGH—which, in connection with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Lauder, returns one member to parliament; and the county sends another.

ANCRUM AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ANCRUM is a small village in the united parish of ANCRUM and LANGNEWTON, 12 miles W. from Kelso, 11 E. from Hawick, and 4 N. from Jedburgh; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, and about 3 miles from the Hawick branch of the North British Railway. Ancrum House, the residence of Sir William Scott, Bart., M.P., stands in a delightful position, and commands some beautifully picturesque prospects; the trees in the park are considered the oldest and finest in this part of the country. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of Thomson, the poet of 'The Seasons;' one of the caves just mentioned is still pointed out, in which, it is said, he frequently retired to indulge his reveries, and on that account is called 'Thomson's Cave;' his name is carved on the roof, by, it is supposed, his own hand. Mount Teviot, one of the seats of the Marquis of Lothian, is also in the parish. Dr. Buchan, the celebrated authur of the 'Domestic Medicine,' and other medical works, was born in this village. The parish stretches six miles along the north side of the river Teviot, and its breadth is about four miles. A part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are likewise sufficiently discernible.

POST OFFICE, ANCRUM, Robert Turnbuil, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Jedburgh) at twenty minutes past seven and forty minutes past eleven morning; and are despatched at a quarter-past eight morning, and thirty-five minutes past two afternoon.

DENHOLM, WITH THE PARISH OF CAVERS.

DENHOLM is a small village in the parish of CAVERS, five miles from Jedburgh, and the same distance from Hawick, pleasantly situated near the Teviot, which is here crossed by a neat stone bridge, erected in 1864. The greater proportion of the inhabitants are stocking weavers, and others are engaged in rural affairs. Many are also employed in the stone quarries adjoining the village. The parish contains an Established Church, a Free Church, a chapel for Independents, and two schools in connection with the Established Church, and one supported by James Douglas, Esq., of Cavers. In the village are two libraries—one Subscription, the other Free. A horticultural society was formed here in 1849. The celebrated DR. LEYDEN was born here, and a monument has been recently erected to his memory in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower, which is in a fine state of cultivation, declines into rich arable fields.

CAVERS is a parish of very irregular figure, and of considerable extent, it consists of two detached portions, on the southern side of the Teviot. The upper portion is separated from the lower one by Hawick and Kirktown parishes.

RAILWAY

HASSENDEAN Station, on the North British Line, is two and a quarter miles from DENHOLM

HAWICK,

HOBKIRK, KIRKTOWN, MINTO, ROBERTON, TEVIOT-HEAD, AND WILTON.

HAWICK is a thriving manufacturing town, a free burgh of regality, and capital of its parish, 50 miles S. by E. from Edinburgh, 20 S.W. from Kelso, 11 S. from Selkirk, and 45 N. from Carlisle; situated on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverly line branch of the North British Railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. It is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot. By the former river the town is divided into nearly two equal parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of WILTON, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included in the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one erected in 1865, besides one of timber. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt. One of its most destructive conflagrations occurred in 1570, when it was set fire to by the English under Lord Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton, bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets and minor thoroughfares extending from it. The town is generally well paved, but considerable improvements in this department are gradually being made. It is very well lighted; the water supply, for many years defective, was, in 1865, considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot five miles above the town. The water is excellent in quality, and in quantity is amply sufficient for the requirements of the population. A thorough system of drainage has, since the introduction of the water supply, been carried out. The Town-hall, where the town-council meetings, and burgh, justice of peace, and small debt courts are held, is in the High-street. The Exchange is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. The environs of Hawick are much admired by strangers; but the improvement of the neighbourhood is much retarded by the territory being held under strict entail, which prevents gentlemen of fortune from settling in this part of the country and embellishing its natural loveliness. The banks of the Teviot are extremely picturesque and delightful, and the approach to the town from the south can be scarcely surpassed for beauty: the extensive nursery grounds, which are so celebrated throughout the kingdom, are in the immediate vicinity of the town, and materially heighten the general effect of the scenery: the grounds belong to the Messrs. Dickson and Turnbulls, and were first established by members of the first-named family upwards of a century ago. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population, and the consequent augmentation of buildings. Some of the residences of the manufacturers are on a most magnificent and luxurious scale, and quite outstrip the mansions of the county gentry. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1545, by James, Douglas Comes de Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed: and in the month of May of the same year this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary: under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two bailies, and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing town-council, made application to parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act, which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and town-clerk; and besides acting as custodiers of the burgh property, exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established. The burgh enjoys all the privileges of a royal one, except that of returning members to parliament. It has a great annual festival, "The Common Riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries. It originated, according to tradition, from the circumstance of some young men of the town having, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), surprised a party of marauding English, during the night, about two miles below the town, and, after slaying the greater part of them, took possession of their colour: a fac-simile of this colour or ensign is now borne by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the occasion, and dubbed with the title of 'Cornet,' who accompanies the authorities in procession round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for their valour displayed in obtaining the standard. The perambulation, which takes place in the month of June, is succeeded by horse-racing, and various national and local gymnastic exercises, to the fortunate competitors in which are awarded proportionate stakes an prizes. Hawick is one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a high reputation. A few blankets are also made. In the tanning of leather and dressing of sheep-skins there are several houses engaged. Four banking agencies are settled here, namely, a branch of the British Linen Company's Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland; there is also a National Security, a Post-office, and a Penny Savings' Bank. The commerce and general trade of the place has received some improvement from the facility of communication with distant parts by railway transit. The North British line has effected a direct means of intercourse with Edinburgh and the north by means of the Berwick and Kelso branch, with those towns and the eastern district of England; while, more recently, the Border Union Railway has opened up communication with the western district of England, the valuable coal-fields of Northumberland, and other mineral districts on both sides of the border. One of the principal hotels here, called 'The Tower,' situated in the Market-place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not consumed by the forces of Sussex: at a more recent period it was the frequent residence of the celebrated Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and Monmouth: it is still the property of the Duke of Buccleuch. The 'Crown' is also a first-class hotel. There are places of worship of the Establishment, the Free Church, and for various religious denominations—a list of these, with their officiating ministers, is given at a subsequent page. The establishment of several institutions evinces a taste for literary pursuits and usful knowledge; among these are a circulating library; and public reading-room, liberally furnished with London and provincial papers; there is also a flourishing Archæological society, with which is connected a museum, rich in memorials of the ancient history of the border, and other antiquarian relics and curiosities. A new combination Poorhouse was erected in 1857, at a cost of £4,000: it will accommodate one hundred and thirty-three inmates. Near this is the Ragged and Industrial School. A farmers' club, or agricultural society, was formed here in 1776; the members assemble regularly once a month for the discussion of questions connected with agriculture. Another club of the same kind, 'The Teviotdale,' was established in 1859, and its discussions are regularly reported. There is also the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, which has an annual exhibition of live stock, to the best of which premiums are awarded, the object of the society being to encourage the improvement of the breed of stock within the district. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every Monday. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, the 21st of September, and the 8th of November—(any of these days of the month happening on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday). A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses and cattle are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after Saint Boswell's fair in July.

HOBKIRK (or HOPEKIRK) is a mountainous parish, 7 miles from Hawick, 11 miles long, and about one mile and a half in breadth; it adjoins the parishes of Cavers, Bedrule, Southdean, Castletown, and Kirktown.

KIRKTOWN is a parish 3 miles from Hawick, about 8 miles long, and about one mile and a half broad, adjoining Cavers, Hobkirk, and Hawick.

MINTO is a parish 5 miles from Hawick, about 5½ miles long, and its greatest breadth about 3 miles; bounded by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers, Wilton, and the county of Selkirkshire.

ROBERTON is a parish 5 miles from Hawick, partly in Roxburghshire, and partly in Selkirkshire; bounded by Yarrow, Selkirk, Ashkirk, Wilton, Hawick, Dumfries-shire, and Ettrick. It is 13 miles long, and about 5 miles broad, and is very mountainous.

WILTON is a parish adjoining Hawick; the greatest portion of its houses, factories, &c., forms a portion of the town of Hawick, and nearly all its social interests are identified with that town.

JEDBURGH,

INCLUDING THE NOBILITY, GENTRY, CLERGY, &c. IN THE PARISHES OF BEDRULE, CRAILING, HOWNAM, OXNAM, AND SOUTHDEAN.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the capital of its parish, and the county town; 46 miles S.E. from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 10 S. by W. from Kelso, the same distance N. by E. from Hawick, and 12 N. from the English border; agreeably situate on the left bank of the Jed—the name of which river, with weorth, the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of Jedweorth or Jedworth; in course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained, by pronouncing it Jeddart or Jethart, which are almost exclusively used by the common people. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets, which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with excellent water. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile of it. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many new buildings have been erected. The principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town is the abbey, which stands upon a piece of ground between the houses and the river. Although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence. To preserve this venerable edifice from the total destruction towards which it was hastening, it several years since received considerable repairs, which were so judiciously conducted as not to interfere with or alter the original design of the structure; this is of the Gothic order, and was founded for canons regular by David I; it runs from east to west, and appears to have been originally three storeys in height; the nave from the tower, and the south front, are mostly entire, but there is no roof on any part of it. Part of the nave is fitted up as the parish church; the tower, which is still standing in tolerably good preservation, is about one hundred and twenty feet in height. Among the other prominent public buildings of Jedburgh are the county gaol and bridewell, the town hall, and the corn exchange; the first-named is designated the 'castle,' from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress; it is a fine erection, in the castellated style, and its internal accommodation and arrangements are upon the most approved system. The appearance of this building is such as to disguise its real character as completely to the sight, as its name does to the ear. From its elevated situation it is seen at a considerable distance all round the town, and when on its summit, a delightful view is obtained; executions have, however, from time immemorial, taken place on this eminence. The town hall is a commodious edifice, built in 1811. The corn exchange is an excellent building, and is situate in Burnwynd. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedency, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the £10 constituents resident within the royalty. The lords of justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick, Selkirk and Peebles), generally in April and September; and the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday for the despatch of civil business, and a small debt court once every month. The justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month; and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder, in returning one member to parliament.

Of late years Jedburgh has advanced towards importance as a seat of manufactures: woollens, blankets, plaidings and flannels, are here produced to a considerable amount, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable emolument is derived from the sale of the produce of the orchards and gardens that surround the town.

There are places of worship belonging to the Establishment, the Free Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterian body, Independents, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics—of these a list and their localities, with their officiating ministers, is given in the directory of the town, and the several schools, most of which are well attended, and conducted upon the best plans of imparting instruction, will be found under an appropriate head. In connection with the town flourishes a horticultural society, and the Jedburgh agricultural society. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs on the third Thursday of January, February, March, April and May, for cattle and horses; on 20th July (wool); 20th of August, if Tuesday, if not, the Tuesday before September 25th (cattle); October 14th (wool); first Tuesday in November (cattle and horses); and the third Thursday in December (cattle).

BEDRULE is a parish in the centre of the county, bounded on the east by Jedburgh, on the north by Ancrum, by Hobkirk on the south, and on the west by Cavers. The village of Bedrule consists of the parish church, school, and a few scattered houses, and is distant from Jedburgh about four miles.

CRAILING is a parish situate 3½ miles from Jedburgh and 6½ from Kelso, bounded on the west by Ancrum, on the south by Jedburgh, on the north by Roxburgh, and on the east by Eckford. There are two small villages in the parish, CRAILING and NISBET. The places of worship and school are at Crailing. The North British railway intersects the parish, and has a station at Nisbet.

HOWNAM is a parish situate amongst the Cheviot hills, bounded on the south by the county of Northumberland, on the east and north by Morebattle, and on the west by Eckford, Jedburgh and Oxnam. The village of Hownam is distant from Jedburgh nine miles and about 12 miles from Kelso.

OXNAM is a parish on the borders of Northumberland, bounded on the east by Hownam, on the north and west by Jedburgh and Southdean. The village of Oxnam is four miles from Jedburgh, which is the nearest town and railway station.

SOUTHDEAN is a large parish in the southern part of Teviotdale, bounded on the north by Jedburgh, on the south by Castleton and the county of Northumberland, on the west by Hobkirk, and on the east by Oxnam. The parish church and school are at CHESTERS, a hamlet in this parish.

KELSO,

NENTHORN, EDNAM, MAKERSTOUN, ROXBURGH, SMAILHOLM, SPROUSTON AND STITCHEL.

KELSO is a burgh of barony, a considerable market town, and the capital of its parish, 42 miles S. E. from Edinburgh, 10 N. from Jedburgh, 23 S.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 N. by E. from Carlisle, and 6 W. from the English border. It is connected with the North British and the Newcastle and Berwick Railways, by branches which approach within a short distance of the town; and it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed, opposite the confluence of the Teviot with that river, and surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history. Its border situation subjected it to almost continual incursions of enemies, and to several conflagrations; to the latter infliction, however, it is indebted for the modern and uniform style which now characterises its appearance. It is built after the manner of the Flemish towns, having a spacious square in the centre, from which diverge four of the principal streets at equal distances. On the east side of the square stands an elegant town-hall, erected in 1816, possessing offices for the chamberlain of the Duke of Roxburgh and town clerk, and a lofty and handsome hall, which is adorned with a fine portrait of the late Duke of Roxburgh. In this hall, periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace and baron bailie, as are also the meetings of the commissioners of police, and the incorporated trades and friendly societies of the town. On the ground floor is a large enclosed piazza, which, on market days, is opened for the use of the farmers and others attending the market. In the Wood market has been erected a very elegant Corn exchange, which has proved a great boon for the farmers and merchants. The bridge, which crosses the Tweed, was built in the beginning of the present century, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a model. It consists of five arches of equal span, and is well worthy of the stranger's notice, particularly from the beautiful views obtained from it, which are not surpassed on any other part of the Tweed. On the north bank is Fleurs Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburgh, and on the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park the beautiful seat of Sir George S. Douglas, Bart.; in the centre may be seen the ancient castle of Roxburgh, with the Eildon hills in the distance, while on the right hand are the venerable remains of Kelso Abbey, founded by David I., in 1128. During the repairs of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, on removing the rubbish from the base of the structure, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been, when perfect, about three feet in diameter, and one ton and a half in weight.

The government of the town is vested in a baron bailie, appointed by the Duke of Roxburgh, and a body of commissioners of police, who derive their powers from the Scotch burgh police act. The town is lighted with gas, and is abundantly supplied with spring water, and among all the towns on the borders stands pre-eminent for its cleanly and orderly appearance. Though not a manufacturing town, Kelso enjoys a considerable trade, from being the chief seat of population in a wide agricultural district, which affords employment and support to a numerous body of the working classes. A considerable trade is carried on in the dressing of lamb and sheep skins, and the currying of leather, and there is a large iron foundry, and two millwrights and engineers. Boots and shoes are made in large quantities supplying not only the town and neighbourhood, but also the different fairs and markets in the north of England. It is noted for its cabinet and upholstery work, and the artizans in this business are selected by the resident gentry within a wide circuit on both sides of the border. There are many corn mills in the neighbourhood, and numerous gardens—the latter producing fruits and vegetables in large quantities. The domestic trade of Kelso is well supported, and many of the shops are furnished with very extensive stocks of all kinds of goods necessary for the consumption of an inland district. The trading and monetary interest in the town are aided in their transactions by the establishment of five banking houses—branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company's Bank, and the City of Glasgow Bank. The principal hotel is the Cross Keys.

There are several places of worship in Kelso, exclusive of the Established Church; their designations, &c, are given in a subsequent page. Among the several benevolent institutions supported by the inhabitants may be enumerated the dispensary, founded in 1777, which possesses hot and cold baths. A society for educating poor boys; a Public Grammar school, conducted by a rector and an assistant, and a Parochial school. The literary institutions include several public libraries and a news and reading room, a literary and polytechnic institution, an association entitled the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society; a society composed of the noblemen and gentlemen residing in this quarter, styled the Bowmen of the Border (instituted in the year 1768), and several benefit societies. Two newspapers are published in Kelso, under the titles of the 'Kelso Mail,' (established in 1797), and the 'Kelso Chronicle,' (in 1838). Kelso, which is at all times a place of gaiety and respectability, has an additional liveliness imparted to it by the occasional rendezvous of the Royal Caledonian Hunt, and by the horse races which take place in the autumn, they being superior to any meetings of the kind in Scotland. The course, which is much admired, is situated about a mile to the northward; on it is an excellent stand, on the model of that at Doncaster. These races never fail to attract great numbers of the fashionable and opulent classes from both sides of the border, and brilliant assemblies at this season are frequently held. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, is held on Friday; and from October to June a market for cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight on Monday: an annual fair also takes place on the 5th of August.

EDNAM (or Edenham) is a small village and parish—the former pleasantly situated on the small river Eden, about two miles and a half north-east from Kelso. It is celebrated as the birth-place of the poet Thomson, his father having been the clerical incumbent of the parish; a monument, erected to the memory of the poet, stands on an eminence near the village. The principal trade establishment in this place is an extensive brewery. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is excellently cultivated and enclosed.

MAKERSTOUN is a small agricultural parish on the north bank of the river Tweed, bounded on the east by Kelso, on the north by Smailholm, and on the west by Mertoun, distant from Kelso five miles. The nearest railway stations are at Rutherford and Roxburgh.

NENTHORN is a parish in Berwickshire, but abutting on Roxburgshire, about four miles from Kelso, two from Stitchel, seven from Earlstown, and about the same distance from Greenlaw; situated on a gentle slope from the river Eden, its length is about four miles, and about the same in width.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, situate about three miles from Kelso, bounded by Makerstoun and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, Ancrum on the south, and Crailing and Eckford on the east, and is a station on the North British Line of Railway.

SMAILHOLM is a small agricultural village and parish, situate about six miles from Kelso, and in the north-eastern part of the county. The nearest railway station is at Fans Loanend, about four miles from the village.

SPROUSTON is a parish and village situate about two and a half miles from Kelso, on the south bank of the river Tweed. The North British Railway passes through the parish, and has a station here.

STITCHEL is a small village and parish situate about three miles from Kelso, and the same distance from Hume, and is bounded on the east by Eccles, on the north by Greenlaw, and on the south by Ednam and Nenthorn. Stitchel House in this parish is a splendid structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture.

LESSUDDEN,

MAXTON, NEWTOWN AND MERTOUN.

LESSUDDEN is a small village in the parish of SAINT BOSWELLS, 10 miles W. from Kelso, 7 N. from Jedburgh, and 5 E. from Melrose; situated nearly in the centre of the parish, at the east end of a spacious green, and distant about one mile from the Saint Boswell station of the North British Railway. The hamlet of St. Boswells which now consists of little more than a public house or two, was at one time noted for one of the largest fairs (on the 18th July, for black cattle, horses, sheep, and wool), held in the county. Saint Boswells' fair was also the resort of salesmen of various goods, and it is still much frequented by the direct descendants of the gypsies for the disposal of earthen, horn and tin ware: fallen off as this fair now is, its occurrence always presents a scene of great merriment in the pastoral district in which it takes place. The parish of St. Boswells (or Lessudden) is three miles in length, by from one and a half to two in breadth; the land is beautifully enclosed, planted and cultivated. On the west rise the Eildon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating—the latter quarter ornamented by the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, enclosed within high banks; beyond the Dryburgh woods rise hills of various altitudes that bound the prospect.

The parish of MAXTON, which is about four miles in length by three in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, well enclosed and planted. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile from the church, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kerrs, of Littledean. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots and English on the 14th of December, 1544, when the latter were totally routed with dreadful slaughter, and the loss of a thousand men, slain and made prisoners.

NEWTOWN is a small village in the parish of Melrose, situated about three miles south from that town, and one mile from Lessudden. The village consists of a United Presbyterian Church, a school, two public houses, a few shops and cottages, and the St. Boswells station on the North British Line.

MERTOUN is a parish in Berwickshire, abutting on Roxburghshire. It is two miles from St. Boswells, and from five to six from Melrose, extending six miles along the banks of the Tweed. Dryburgh Abbey, a short distance from Nenthorn, is much frequented by tourists as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott.

LILLIESLEAF, BOWDEN, AND MIDHOLM.

LILLIESLEAF is a village and parish—the former 10 miles from Galashiels, the same distance from Jedburgh, 8 from Hawick, 6 from Selkirk, three from NEW BELSES STATION, and four from HASSENDEAN STATION on the North British Railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and trades connected therewith. There is a subscription library and a free parish library in the village. The parish, which is four miles in length by nearly three in breadth, is intersected by the Ale water. The lands are under good tillage, and the district has a very pleasing appearance.

BOWDEN village is two miles and a half from Melrose, standing in a low situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed. The parish comprises a portion of the Eildon hills, from whence the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. The vestiges of a Roman military road, with circular stations or encampments, may be traced in this district; and a ruin at HOLLYDEAN, at an early period a strong fortification, and the ancient residence of the now noble family of Roxburgh. Within the parish, besides Bowden, is the small village of MIDHOLM, or Midlam, pleasingly situated on a rising ground, two miles from Lilliesleaf.

POST OFFICE, LILLIESLEAF, Thomas Turnbull, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Selkirk) at half past twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at seven morning.

MELROSE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF NEWSTEAD, GATTONSIDE, DARNICK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MELROSE is a parish and free burgh of barony—the town, small and ancient, is 36 miles S. by E. from Edinburgh, 12 S. W. from Jedburgh, 7 N. E. from Selkirk, and 48. E. from Galashiels; delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon hills, and on the line of the North British Railway, which runs through the town. The station, a spacious and handsome erection, presents a very fine appearance, and being situated on rising ground, it may be seen from all parts of the neighbourhood. The town is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading out at the corners. In the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey. There are a number of new and handsome houses, while others exhibit proofs of great antiquity, presenting decorated stones that once undoubtedly formed a portion of the superb abbey for which the place is so celebrated. The Corn Exchange, recently erected in the Market-place, is a handsome structure, and contains an elegant hall, capable of accommodating an audience of about 500. There are three hotels and posting houses in the town, namely, the 'Abbey,' the 'George,' and the 'King's Arms.' An iron suspension bridge over the Tweed, for foot passengers, leads to the village of GATTONSIDE, on the opposite bank of the river. The abbey of Melrose, one of the largest and most magnificent Gothic structures in the kingdom, adjoins the town on the south side of the Tweed. On viewing the exterior of this noble pile of building from the south, it has a most imposing effect; but on entering the interior, the lofty Gothic columns, in a double row, supporting the arched majestic roof—the elegance and variety of its sculpture, the multiplicity of its statues, the beauty of its stone, and the symmetry of its parts, must strike every stranger with profound admiration. It was founded in 1136 by King David, who dedicated it to the Virgin Mary, and endowed it with extensive privileges and almost princely revenues. The monks were of the Cistercian order, and this monastery was the mother foundation of all establishments of that order in Scotland. It is somewhat remarkable that it is only within the limit of the present century that Melrose Abbey became an object of interest to the tourist. That interest was principally awakened by the publication of the 'Lay of the last Minstrel,' a poem by Sir Walter Scott, whose description of this venerable time-recalling fabric induced the visits of strangers from all quarters. At the beginning of the present century, Melrose Abbey was used as the Parish church until the erection of the present church on the Weirhill. Besides the Parish church, there are churches belonging to the Free church, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Independent denominations. About two miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey of the Culdees settled in this part of the kingdom. All that remains, however, of the old structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks around it are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river like buttresses; the situation is in the highest degree pleasant, commanding a fine view of the valley of the Tweed. About a mile nearer the town of Melrose is the village of NEWSTEAD, near which was another abbey, called the 'Red Abbey.' Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality; but it is now a free burgh of barony, and governed by a baron bailie chosen by the burgesses. A justice of peace court is held here on the first Saturday in every month. The banks of the Tweed are clothed with plantations in the finest order, and the land around appears in the highest state of cultivation. The weekly market is held on Monday, and there are eleven annual fairs, namely, on the first Monday in January, first Monday in February, first Monday and the Saturday before the last Tuesday in March, first Monday in May, first Wednesday in June, first Monday and the 12th day of August, the Saturday after the first Tuesday in October, the first Monday and the twenty-second day of November, and the first Monday in December. The August fair is considered the largest for lambs in Scotland, and Mr. Davidson's sheep and cattle sales are held every alternate Monday the year round.

The antique and rural village of GATTONSIDE stands on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, with which town a communication is maintained by means of the suspension bridge. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed.

LARNICK is a small village in Melrose parish, situated on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town.

NEW CASTLETON

IS a modern village, in an extensive mountainous parish, formerly known by the name of Castletown, but more generally by the popular title of Liddesdale, being in the vale of the Liddle water. The village, which owes its rise to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch, and has superseded the old parish village (a little further up the vale), is 26 miles S. from Jedburgh, 20 S.E. from Hawick, and 10 N.E. from Canonby; situated in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale. It consists principally of two long streets of neat houses, which occupy a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle. Except that a few of the inhabitants are employed by the cotton manufacturers of Carlisle, there is no other business worth mentioning. The parish is upwards of eighteen miles in length by fourteen in breadth. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and many others of castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the thirteenth century by Comyn, Earl of Monteath, and was one of the largest fortresses on the border; it has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during this operation several small pieces of cannon were found, and, among other antiquities, a gold ring, evidently of very old manufacture, bearing the inscription—In Broderlie Amite. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church and one for the United Presbyterians. There are two libraries—a subscription, and a parochial. Fairs are held in April, May, September and November—some of them are for hiring servants.

POST OFFICE, NEW CASTLETON, Margaret Murray, Post Master.—Letters from all parts of England and Scotland arrive at twenty minutes past seven morning, and from the North and East of Scotland at half-past six evening, and are despatched to all parts of England and Scotland at ten minutes past seven morning, and at ten minutes past six evening.

YETHOLM, LINTON AND MOREBATTLE.

YETHOLM parish is bounded on the south by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trouting stream; the surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont: the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bowmont; that on the west side called 'TOWN YETHOLM,' is about 8 miles S. from Kelso; the other, designated 'KIRK-YETHOLM,' stands at the distance of about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream: both are humble in appearance, especially the latter, which is chiefly inhabited by gypsies—a race formerly remarkable for their disorderly lives and dangerous characters, and at this day distinguished by peculiarity of habits from the general body of the community. The close proximity of the border, most likely, induced the settlement of the gypsies in this locality. The old Parish Church, which, at the time of its demolition, was the oldest thatched church in Scotland, is now replaced by an elegant edifice of black stone, the windows and corners being faced with white. Besides the Established church there are one each for the members of the United Presbyterian and Free Churches. Fairs are held on the 27th of June, and the 24th of October for sheep.

LINTON is a strictly agricultural parish, extending nine miles in length by three in breadth—bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west, and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile: besides that stream, it has two small lochs, one of which abounds with trout, the other with eels. The land, which rises from the Kaile, is under the best system of cultivation. The church is a humble structure, beautifully situated on a high mound.

The parish of MOREBATTLE is about nine miles in length, by a mean breadth of four; it is bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south, and the county of Northumberland on the east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kaile and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. Near the former stream, at the distance of seven and a half miles from Kelso and ten from Jedburgh, stands the village. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is Morebotle, which which signifies 'the dwelling-place at the Marsh. The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet House, indicate this parish to have been the frequent scene of warfare. The places of worship are, Established and Free Churches, and for United Presbyterians.

To KELSO, George Cockburn, from Town-Yetholm, Tuesday and Friday, Robert Walker and John Steel, Friday, and James Brockie, daily

SELKIRKSHIRE.

THIS small county, of irregular form, lies in the south of Scotland: bounded by Roxburghshire on the east and south-east, on the west by the counties of Dumfries and Peebles, and on the south and south-west by Dumfries-shire. The county extends twenty-seven miles from south-west to north-east, and is seventeen and a half miles in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east: its area comprehends 260 square miles, or 166,524 statute acres.

EARLY HISTORY.—This border county was formerly designated the 'Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest', from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many of the royal charters it is entitled 'The Forest,' and before regular sheriffs were appointed, it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. The ancient history of this county is so intimately associated with that of Roxburghshire (already briefly detailed), that but few incidents worthy of special notice, exclusively belong to the district. Unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments—though it possesses a number of ruined 'keeps,' the seats of feudal strength; and among other objects worthy the inspection of the antiquary, is a large portion of a stupendous work of the Romanized Britons, called the 'Catrail,' once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the fifth century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons.

SURFACE, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continued alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many 'cleughs' and 'hopes,' that run up for some distance between the heights: these vales, as well as the waters (noticed hereafter) which pour through them, have been repeatedly the theme of Scottish as well as English lyrists. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now subjected to the plough, and in these situations wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are—Blackhouse Hills, 2,370 feet; Windlestrae Law, 2,295; Law Kneis, 1,900; the Three Brethren, 1,978; Black Andrew, 1,966; Pentlaw, 1,964; Wardlaw, 1,900; Minchmoor, 1,877; Hangingshaw Law, 1,780; and Peatlaw, 1,557. Throughout the county generally, agriculture is as well understood and practised as in any district of the kingdom. Great attention is paid to sheep farming, and the improvement of the breed of sheep; this was stimulated, and kept up with great success, by the praiseworthy conduct of Lord Napier, who, at the termination of the war, betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming, as an amusement. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. Of minerals, none of the more useful have yet been found in this county, it being equally deficient of coal, lime, and sandstone; in some parts, however, abundance of whinstone is obtained, and a good deal of granite. The manufactures of this county, which will be more particularly noticed in the directory of Selkirk and Galashiels, consist, in both towns, of woollen, tweeds, tartans, shawls, and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed: the latter valuable river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, during a placid course in a deep channel of nine miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, also receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be esteemed a river of this county: it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick two miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being Saint Mary's Loch, and the Loch of the Lowes, lying at the head of the Yarrow. The principal Railway line with which this county is connected is the North British, and the chief town that lies in its route is Galashiels, and a branch from the main line runs to Selkirk: another branch line is appoaching completion, viz., the line from Galashiels by Innerleithen to Peebles.

The county of Selkirk contains only three complete parishes, namely, Ettrick, Stow, and Yarrow; but has portions of seven other parochial divisions. There is a combination Poorhouse at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose, and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh, but not represented in parliament; the county at large returns one member.

GALASHIELS AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GALASHIELS is a burgh of barony, and market town, the latter which is one of manufacturing celebrity, is 31 miles S.S.E from Edinburgh, 18 E. from Peebles, 6 N. from Selkirk, 4 N.W. from Melrose, and 30 s. by W. from Berwick, lying partly in the parish of Galashiels and partly in Ladhope, charmingly situated on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed; its parish is partly in Selkirkshire, and partly in that of Roxburgh; and it lies on the North British Railway (Waverley route) for which line there is a station in the town, there is also a line to Selkirk, and another from Innerleithen to Peebles, is fast (1866) approaching completion. The parish of Galashiels was formed out of two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, in the early part of the seventeenth century. Galashiels is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than forty. It is composed of several streets, all of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of handsome villas in the immediate neighbourhood, these being the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, still contains the church, the manse, and a few of the original respectable dwellings; and this portion has also been much improved by new erections. It is situated on a sort of table-land overlooking the picturesque vale of the Gala, and is allowed to be the most pleasing as well as the most healthy part of the town. The house are mostly built of blue whinstone, and a fine white freestone, and all being slated, the entire presents a neat handsome appearance, the streets being also gas lighted. The river is here crossed by three bridges, two of stone and one of wood. The wire suspension bridge, erected in 1813, was swept away by a great flood some years ago. The Town or Public Hall, erected by a joint-stock company, is a handsome building, situated in High-street, it is two storeys high, the upper storey being used for public meetings, concerts, &c.

For many years Galashiels has enjoyed an envied distinction in the manufacture of tweeds, shawls, and tartans, all of wool, and in great estimation from the superiority of their fabrics. This is the staple of the place, and there are many houses engaged in it; the numerous factories contain machines for spinning the yarn, besides a quantity of that article annually imported. This town, in common with others in the south, interested in manufactures, sustained for a long period great inconvenience from their distance from seaports, railways, and collieries; but the extension of the North British Railway to these parts has to a great extent obviated the obstructions that commerce had previously laboured under. The supply of water, too, is sometimes limited in the dry months of the year, it being obtained by wells sunk in the gravelly subsoil upon which the town is built, the water thus obtained is liable to be polluted by the number of drains. There is also a private water company, but in a dry summer this source of supply generally fails. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trades, and conferring on matters therewith connected. The business and commerce of the town and district are facilitated in their monetary transactions by the establishment of three highly respectable bankihg-houses—they are respectively branches of the 'National Bank of Scotland,' the 'Bank of Scotland' and the 'Royal Bank of Scotland.' There are several agencies, from fire and life assurance companies. Of other trades flourishing in Galashiels are the coal, corn, timber, brewing, and leather tanning. A small debt court is held in the town six times a year. A newspaper is published, the 'Border Advertiser,' it is conducted with considerable talent, and has a large circulation in the border counties; it is published on Friday.

The places of worship in Galashiels comprise churches of the Establishment, and of the Free Communion of Scotland, and edifices for the worship of United Presbyterians, Baptists, Episcopalians, Congregationalists, and a sect termed Glassites. Some excellent schools afford the means of a sound education at a small expense; among these are the Parochial and Subscription, and there are several private academies.

A short distance from the town is situated ABBOTSFORD, the beautiful seat of the late celebrated novelist, Sir Walter Scott. A bulk grain market is held on Tuesday, and a fair on the third Wednesday of March, and a live stock sale every alternate Saturday.

SELKIRK

WITH THE NOBILITY, GENTRY AND CLERGY IN THE PARISHES OF ASHKIRK, ETTRICK ROBERTON, KIRKHOPE AND YARROW.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish; 38 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, 22 E. by S. from Peebles, 12 N.N.W. from Hawick, 8 S.W. from Melrose, and 6 S. from Galashiels; occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk that was established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting-seat of the king. In the oldest charter it is called Seleschirche, Sele chyre, or Sel chire, which signify 'the great' or 'the good church.' When a second kirk was erected in the vicinity, after the foundation of a monastery by David I. in 1113, the prior place received the dignified title of Selkirk Regis, while the village of the monks was denominated Selkirk Abbatis: the monks of Selkirk did not, however, remain long settled in the town; they were removed to a more pleasing locality by their royal patron. Of the castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its site cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Formerly Selkirk exhibited but an indifferent appearance in its buildings and their arrangements; but latterly a spirit of improvement has been developed which has imparted to the place an aspect far more prepossessing. Many handsome private houses have of late been built in the vicinity of the town. The market place is embellished with a very handsome monument in memory of Sir Walter Scott. In High-street there is a monument in remembrance of Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshiels, in this county; it is the work of Andrew Currie, a native artist. In 1865 extensive alterations and improvements were made to the county gaol, at a cost of about £2,000. The town hall in the market place is also to undergo considerable enlargement in order to provide more adequate accommodation for the business of the sheriff courts.

Selkirk was in past ages celebrated far the making of brogues [a description of single-soled shoe]; tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records, that when the Highland army, in 1785, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish six thousand pair of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied, and, soon after, a few hundreds more. This branch has greatly declined at the present day. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods, as tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls, in which process five very extensive mills are employed, and one wool spinning mill; there are also two extensive tanneries. A railway is now opened from here to Galashiels, where it joins the Waverley line of the North British system, thus giving to Selkirk, railway communication with most parts of Great Britain. The town possesses two principal inns—the 'County' and the 'Fleece.' Branches of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' of the 'Union Bank of Scotland" and the 'National Bank of Scotland,' are settled here, and there is a Savings' Bank. The introduction of manufactures has caused a great augmentation of the population of the town, and a material extension of its ancient limits. As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by two bailies, a dean of guild, and ten councillors, one third of whom retire annually, and their successors are elected the first week in November. The sheriff's court is held weekly. The magistrates hold criminal court as occasion requires, and the justice of peace lieutenancy meetings are regulated in like manner.

The places of public worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, two United Presbyterian, an independent, and Episcopal chapels. The institutions for education in Selkirk are of a judicious character; they comprise, besides the Parochial school, a burgh school, subscription school, and some private academies. The inhabitants support a public library, and a Mechanics' Institute. The general scenery, in the vicinity of Selkirk, is very delightful: the rivers Ettrtek and Yarrow form a junction, about a mile and a half above Selkirk, and empty their waters into the town: the beautiful mansion of Bowhill [belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch], the stately ruins of Newark Castle, the fertile straths, and the serpentine windings of the two rivers, together with many elegant seats, form beautiful scenery, romantic and diversified. Philiphaugh, the residence of Sir John N. Murray, is a beautiful castellated mansion; amongst others may be noted Hangingshaw, the residence of James Johnstone, Esq., of Alva; Sunderland Hall, of C. S. Plummer, Esq., and Broadmeadows, of the Hon. William Napier. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April, and 31st of October.

ETTRICK is a parish situated at the extreme joint of Selkirkshire, bordering on Dumfrieshire; this parish is very mountainous, Thirlstane Castle, the residence of Lord Napier, is situated in Ettrick. There is an Established church and a Parochial school.

KIRKHOPE is a parish in the presbytery of Selkirk, it formerly formed part of the parish of Yarrow from which it was disjointed in 1851, the parish is very hilly, there being eight hills in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. A church of the Establishment and two small endowed schools, are situated at ETTRICK BRIDGE END, a small village in Kirkhope.

YARROW is a parish in the presbytery of Selkirk, lying south-west from that town, the parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by 'Hogg,' the Ettrick poet,' to whom a monument has been erected at St. Mary's loch, this loch is a great resort for visitors in summer, good accommodation being obtained at St. Mary's cottage, kept by Mrs. Richardson. This house is conducted on temperance principles. There are an Established and Free church here, also a Parochial school.

STIRLINGSHIRE,

ONE of the most important and beautiful counties in Scotland, is situated partly in the Highlands and partly in the Lowlands; bounded on the east by the county of Linlithgow and the river Forth, on the south and west by Dumbartonshire, on the north by the shires of Perth and Clackmannan (which latter county touches it also on the east), and on the south and south-east by a portion of Lanarkshire. Its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north, being the Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water on the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely singular, and has been fancifully likened both to a fish and a serpent: its tail, which diminishes to an apex at the north, is inserted between the counties of Dumbarton and Perth; and its head is suddenly turned towards the shires of Lanark (on the south) and Linlithgow on the south-east. Its length from east to west is thirty-six miles—but, following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of forty-five miles; its breadth varies from twelve to twenty miles, except where it declines towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of four hundred and sixty-two square miles, or two hundred and ninety-five thousand, eight hundred and seventy-five statute acres of land, of which two-thirds are under cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county, from its situation between the firths of Forth and Clyde, and on the direct passage from the northern to the southern parts of the island, has been the scene of many memorable transactions; and there are few counties where monuments of antiquity are so frequently to be met with; neither does it yield to any in point of modern improvements or in the beauties of scenery. The wall of Antonius, built for the purpose of protecting the Roman conquests on the south, traversed the lower division of the county, and has left some slight traces for the investigation of the antiquary; the remains of Roman forts are also distinguishable, and weapons and coins of that invading power have been occasionally dug out of the soil. After the overthrow of the Pictish sovereignty, Stirlingshire with all the country on the south-side of the Forth, was for some years under the dominion of the Northumbrian Saxons; and at a later date it passed quietly under the government of the Scottish sovereigns. Subsequently, considerable importance was attached to the county from the position and strength of the castle of Stirling (which we shall notice more particularly under the head of its locality), commanding, as it did, the most important pass betwixt the northern and southern districts of the kingdom. In the twelfth century it was much benefited by David I, who erected religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, within its bounds: and the inmates of these establishments being generally learned men, their pious authority tended to civilise the rude manners of the population.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MINERALS, MANUFACTURES, &c.—This county, as has been said, is partly Highland and partly Lowland. The former, which is in the western quarter, and adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here the majestic Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than three thousand feet. East from this Highland part, the land becomes flattish, or gently inclining towards the Forth or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of greatest altitude are from thirteen to fifteen hundred feet in height; from one of these eminences, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained one of the finest views in Scotland; it is computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine green sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of beautiful carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich vale of the Forth. In this quarter the country has experienced improvements of the most extensive and beneficial character; and it now exhibits the pleasing spectacle of fertile meadows, fields in the highest state of tillage, with plantations, pleasure grounds, gardens, and orchards, all in the most exuberant vegetation and fruitfulness. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile in the county is the alluvial or carse land, which occupies many thousands of acres, on the banks of the Forth; in this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl, and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam present their surface to the husbandman in other parts of the county. From the great variety of the soil, the system of agriculture in Stirlingshire naturally cannot be uniform, nor its produce equally abundant or limited to any particular species: large crops of wheat, barley, beans, peas, turnips, potatoes, &c. are raised; the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of numerous flocks of sheep, which are of the old black-faced or Highland breed; there are but few cattle reared, the county being sufficiently supplied by the drovers from the Highlands. Stirlingshire is inferior to few districts of Scotland in the quantity and variety of its Mineral productions, the most abundant of which are coal, ironstone, limestone, and sandstone. The principal coal-pits are in the southern base of the Lennox hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district, in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde Canal: the county produces such quantities of this mineral as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but, by means of the Union Canal, to supply the metropolis. The ironstone, limestone, and sandstone are found in the same districts with the coal. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought about ninety years ago, but the working of them was soon discontinued; copper, lead, and cobalt have likewise been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. The grand staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on, in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians), to a valuable extent; at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn (ever memorable for the decisive defeat of the army of Edward by the triumphant Bruce) carpets are manufactured; while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, and chemical establishments.

RIVERS, MOUNTAINS, AND RAILWAYS.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire; it takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into that noble estuary called the Frith of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only seven miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than twenty by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed 'the links of the Forth.' The next river in magnitude is the Carron; it has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burden for about two miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blane, and the Kelvin, none of which, however, require particular notice. Besides these waters, the county enjoys the advantage of the Forth and Clyde Canal and the Union Navigation, which is of paramount importance to the commerce of this productive and flourishing district. The eminences of greatest altitude above the level of the sea are—Ben Lomond (before mentioned), 3,262; Alva Hill, 1,600; and Campsie Fells, 1,500. The county is intersected by the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, with several branches—thus affording facilities of communication with all parts of the kingdom.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENATION, &c.—Stirlingshire comprises twenty-two complete parishes, and portions of four others. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is a royal burgh) and Falkirk: the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline, and Inverkeithing, in returning a member to the legislature; and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie, and Hamilton. The county, of course, deputes a third representative.

AIRTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

AIRTH is an ancient village in the parish of its name, the latter about six miles in length by about two in breadth, 27 miles W. from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 E. from Stirling, and 6 N.W. from Falkirk; situate on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to KENNET PANS, and was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed; it possesses an Established church, a Free church, and United Presbyterian chapel, and an Episcopal church at DUNMORE. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages, &c. to Alloa, and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success; and the coal mines, of which there are several in the neighbourhood, afford employment to many of the labouring classes. Airth Castle, occupied by the Earl of Dunmore is an elegant mansion, in the pure Gothic style, and few buildings are superior to it either in chaste simplicity of architecture or elegance of design. In the parish are three ancient towers, one at AIRTH, another at DUNMORE, a third at POWFOULIS; that at Airth is of very early date, and is called Wallace's tower, from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slew the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle, who was a prisoner—the tower is still in tolerable preservation. Some years ago an anchor was found in Dunmore hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil of a rich character, and well cultivated.

BALFRON.

IS a manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 19 miles from Glasgow (its post town), the like distance from Stirling, and 16 from Dumbarton, agreeably situated on the declivity of a hill. The houses are for the most part well built, but many are in a very delapidated condition. The parish is about 11 miles in length, and in breadth 3 miles; bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnock and Fintry, on the south and north-west by Killearn and Drymen, and on the north and north-east by Drymen and Kippen. The cotton spinning works of Robert Jeffrey and Sons, are situated in this village, and employ a considerable number of the inhabitants, chiefly females, whose general clean and healthful appearance may be ascribed to the salutary regulations enforced in the establishment of this respectable firm. These gentlemen have also a school in which the children of persons employed in their works receive gratuitous instruction. Many weavers are employed here by the Glasgow manufacturers, in connection with whom is a resident agent. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is in the village, and in a building well adapted for the purpose. The annual fair is held on the third Tuesday of May (old style).

BRIDGE OF ALLAN.

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF LECROPT, LOGIE, CAUSEWAYHEAD, BLAIR LOGIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN.—This beautifully romantic and fashionable watering place, is situate on the river Allan, about one and a half miles from its confluence with the Forth, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochil Hills. It is partly in Lecropt parish and partly in that of Logie. It is also situated in two counties—Stirlingshire and Perthshire, both parishes being placed in these counties—a portion of the parish of Logie is also in the county of Clackmannan. It is a post town about three miles from Stirling, and is a station on the Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian line. It is resorted to by persons from all parts of the kingdom, as well for pleasure as for restoration of health, on account of the mildness of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its mineral waters. Prior to the discovery of these springs this place was comparitively little known, and presented to the tourist the unassuming aspect of a small and quiet country hamlet, with a few whitewashed and thatched cottages, embosomed in venerable trees, together with an old mill, and an ancient public house, offering 'entertainment for man and beast.' Since that period things have greatly changed, and Bridge of Allan is now a large and handsome village, consisting of several rows of well-built houses, tasteful villas; various private hotels, and three public ones, which for elegance and comfort are not surpassed in Scotland; the whole being appropriated to the reception of visitors. The higher part of the village in the neighbourhood of the Wells and Coneyhill, is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many handsome villas are erected, the sloping sides of the hill being tastefully adorned with trees, commanding a most beautiful and varied aspect, including Stirling, its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Yeith, and Allan, with other objects of interest. Numerous improvements were made for the accommodation and recreation of the public, by the late Major J. Alexander Henderson, of Westerton, on whose estate a considerable portion of the village is erected. There are several places of worship—these comprise churches of the Establishment, a quod sacra church, a Free church, one for United Presbyterians, and a Scotch Episcopal chapel. Among the various attractions and objects of amusement are found billiard and reading rooms, and a library, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures; a bowling green, a cricket ground, and several miles of good angling. The late great patron of the place also revived the ancient and interesting game of tilting at the ring—a sport much practised in the reign of James I. Meetings for Scottish athletic games are annually held in Westerton Park, where also the Ochil archery clubhold some of thire prize meetings. But the chief seat of attraction is the mineral wells, situated on the Airthrey estate, the property of Lord Abercromby, and within a few minutes walk of the village; they are highly celebrated for their medicinal virtues, and have proved of great benefit to numerous invalids, who have resorted hither to use the waters, both internally and externally—for the latter invigorating purposes there are convenient baths; and the hotels before noticed are establishments admirably conducted for the reception of families and other visitors; while the walks around are beneficial auxiliaries in improving the health of the invalids. Among the business establishments, besides the inns, are large bleach works, a paper manufactory, a spinning mill, and the usual trades found in a small country town.

The Bridge of Allan connects the parishes of LECROPT and LOGIE—the former lies partly in the county of Perth, and partly in that of Stirling, at the confluence of the Teith and Allan, and is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Logie parish is situated on the Forth, at a part where the counties of Perth, Stirling, and Clackmannan meet; a portion of the parish, as before mentioned, being situated in each of the three counties. In this parish stands the tall and desolate ruin of Cambus-kenneth Abbey, founded by David I., in 1147, and in former ages a pile of great magnitude.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling (the latter its post town), situated in the counties of Stirling and Clackmannan, and at the foot of Abbey Craig (a detached portion of the Ochil range), which presents a precipitous front of about 260 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge and almost perpendicularly over the village, stands Wallace's monument (now, 1866, in course of erection), which, when completed, will form a very picturesque and conspicuous object to a scene rich in natural beauty and historical associations, as well as being a fitting memorial of Scotland's greatest champion.

DENNY AND DUNIPACE,
AND THE VILLAGES OF BONNYBRIDGE, DENNY-LOANHEAD, HAGGS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DENNY is a thriving and increasing post town in the parish of its name, 29 miles W. from Edinburgh, 20 N.E. from Glasgow, 7 S. from Stirling, and 6 W. from Falkirk, the extent of the parish is about six miles long by an average of four in breadth; bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, on the west and north by the Carron, the contiguous parishes are St. Ninians and Dunipace, and on the south by Falkirk and Cumbernauld, are the rivers Carron and Bonny, and its lateral boundaries north and south, it is on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through the town. Near this parish is the Forth and Clyde Canal, which is of great benefit to the agriculturists, as well as the manufacturers of the district. Places of interest to the tourist in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron glen, and the ruins of Torwood Castle. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history, but are now that of active industry, and a source of wealth to the surrounding country: the uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the stream, has caused the establishment of very considerable works on its margin, comprising paper, woollen and dye-wood mills; and chemical works, and in the vicinity are two distilleries; also coal and iron mines, the whole furnishing employment to a large and industrious population, and causing a great circulation of money through an important district. The Denny Railway opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly four miles distant. The terminus is close to the town, from which run two sub-branches, extending into those districts of iron and coal mines which are already opened in the immediate neighbourhood, from which the mineral is conveyed to works near Coatbridge. The town of Denny has been greatly improved of late; the houses are generally well built, and the aspect of the place is neat, clean and healthful. There is a public library, and a handsome hall where the Oddfellows' lodge and public meetings are held. There is a lodge of the Ancient Order of Foresters, Court Torwood, and the Order of Free Gardeners, who have also a hall. There is also a lodge of Freemasons. The town contains a population of nearly three thousand persons, most of whom are employed at the adjoining public works. The places of worship are the Parish church, Free church, an United Presbyterian chapel, and one for Roman Catholics; there are a Parochial and other schools. Two fairs are held here annually—one on the Wednesday before the 12th May, the other on the Wednesday after the 11th November.

DUNIPACE is a parish divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace, and Torwood, bounded on the west and north by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert, and on the south by Falkirk and Denny. This locality is rendered famous, in the works of most Scottish topographists, from possessing two mounts, called 'the hills of Dunipace,' the origin of which, or the purposes to which they were devoted, have exercised the ingenuity and stimulated the researches of the antiquarians, the common traditionary account is, that they were erected as monuments of a peace, concluded upon their site, between the Romans and Caledonians; but there are strong reasons for presuming that they are sepulchural memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots, as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally, the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. This parish is rich in minerals and has an extended line of the Denny branch of railway crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny, extending to those mines already opened, and which gives employment with the other works to the inhabitants of this district. The places of worship are the Parish church and a Free church with schools.

BONNYBRIDGE is a small village, about two miles and a half south-east of Denny (its post town) it is partly situated in the latter parish, but mostly in the parish of Falkirk, from which place it is about four miles distant. The ground around here is arable, and presents a most pleasing aspect. The Forth and Clyde Canal passes the village, and upon its banks are the very extensive works of Ure & Co., iron-founders, and those of Messrs. Smith and Wellstood, Columbian Stove Works. In connection with these works is a commodious literary hall, containing a library with upwards of 300 volumes, daily newspapers and periodicals are also furnished, the whole being supplied by these firms for the instruction and edification of the men employed at their works, who number upwards of 100 hands.

DENNY LOANHEAD is a straggling village, situated about two miles south of Denny, in the same parish and post town. A chapel for United Presbyterians is in the village and a public school. A chemical works is situated at UNDERWOOD, which is divided from the village by the Bonny water. Minerals abound in the neighbourhood. The Forth and Clyde Canal and the Caledonian Railway pass about a mile to the south.

HAGGS, containing a few houses, is situated about one and a half miles west of Denny Loanhead, and in the parish of Denny; it contains a quoad sacra church, belonging to the establishment, and a public school. A distillery is at the extreme west-end of the parish at BANKIER. The battle of Kilsyth was fought, 15th August, 1645, in the neighbourhood of Hollandbush, near Haggs.

DRYMEN AND BUCHANAN,

AND THE DISTRICT OF CROFTAMIE.

DRYMEN a parish and village, about 18 miles from Glasgow (its post town), 15 miles long by ten in breadth, bounded on the north by Aberfoyle; on the east by Kippen, Balfron and Killearn, on the south by Killearn, Kilmaronock and Dumbarton, on the west by Buchanan and Kilmaronock, lies on the south-eastern shore of Loch Lomond, into which, below the village, runs the river Endrick. Upon the verge of this river, and on the Dumbarton road, stands Catter House, the residence of Peter Mac Lagan, Esq. (chamberlain to the Duke of Montrose). The village contains the Parish church, and also a chapel for United Presbyterians. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in a handsome building, well adapted for the purpose. In this village resided Lord Napier, the inventor of the celebrated logarithms. Fairs for cattle are held on the third Wednesday in April (old style), and 17th May (new style).

BUCHANAN is a parish lying on the western extremity of the county, is mountainous and moorish, it is bounded by the parish of Arrochar on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Aberfoyle, Loch Katrine and Drymen on the east, and is about twenty-four miles in length and five in breadth. The river Forth rises in the district at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. The seat of his Grace the Duke of Montrose, Buchanan Castle, stands on the margin of Loch Lomond, and the Fort of Inversnaid near the head of the Loch.

CROFTAMIE is a district containing a few houses, in the parish of Kilmaronock (Dunbartonshire) situated about one and half miles from Drymen village; the Forth of Clyde Junction Railway runs through it, and the Drymen station is situated here.

POST OFFICE, DRYMEN, Cosmo M'Beath, Post Master.—Letters from all parts (except Buchanan), arrive (from Glasgow) at fifty-five minutes past eight morning, and are despatched thereto at one afternoon.

Letters for the Parish of BUCHANAN should be addressed near GLASGOW.

The nearest Money Order Office is at BALFRON, five miles distant.

Letters for CROFTAMIE should be addressed DRYMEN, by GLASGOW.

FALKIRK,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF BOTHKENNAR, CAMELON, CARNOCK, CARRON, CARRONSHORE, LAURIESTON, POLMONT, REDDING, SLAMANAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, and the principal town of the eastern district of the county, as it is of the parish to which it gives name. The extreme length of the parish is nine miles, its breadth five and a quarter miles; it is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamanan, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire; the town is 24 miles W. from Edinburgh, 22 N.E. from Glasgow, 11 S.E. from Stirling, and three from Grangemouth. It is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called 'the Carse or Kerse of Falkirk,' and commanding a most extensive prospect, which, for beauty of landscape, is scarcely surpassed in any part of Scotland: the views comprise (besides the rich and fertile 'carse,' which is well cultivated, and interspersed with villages and several gentlemen's seats), the river Forth, with vessels passing to and from the ports of Grangemouth, Alloa, Kincardine, &c., and also up and down the great canal, which intersects the country about half a mile north of the town; while to the south it is bounded by Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town. Few situations more eligible for rendering a place handsome could have been selected: as it is, the town has a very good appearance; it consists of (excluding a number of back streets and lanes, or wynds) one principal street, which is long and irregular; in general the houses are built of hewn stone, and the town is ornamented with a steeple, one hundred and forty-six feet high, in which are two bells and a clock, and immediately to the west of which, an equestrian statue of the late Duke of Wellington was erected in 1854, by public subscription. It is of stone, and is a great ornament to the High street: it is protected by an iron railing. In the year 1859 a commodious exchange or corn market was built on the north side of the Parish church, in which a stock market is now held every Thursday, and is well attended. The dues or customs from the market amount to about £170 per annum. The port of Grangemouth, situate about three miles to the north-east of Falkirk, has now been connected with the burgh by a railway, formed by the Forth and Clyde Canal Company. Among the inns we may mention, as being about the most central, the Blue Bell, in the occupation of Mr. A. W. Askew; here the commercial man and others will find excellent accommodation. A number of small villas are situated towards the north of the town; they form a street, about half a mile in length—uniting to the town the villages of GRAHAMSTON and BAINSFORD, and thereby forming a continuous double line of upwards of a mile in extent. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, and seven councillors. This body first came into existence in 1833, but for want of any power of raising money to carry on a municipal government, the powers of the magistrates were latent. This defect has now been remedied by the act just passed called the 'Falkirk Police and Improvement Act,' under which the magistrates assist the inhabitants for police and improvement purposes. The inhabitants of Falkirk have been long celebrated for a manly spirit of independence, both political and religious, combined with a liberality of sentiment and a sociality of intercourse seldom witnessed elsewhere.

Falkirk, as it is situate in a very populous district, with no town of consideration contiguous, commands an extensive inland trade, as there is no market held in the seven or eight surrounding parishes; and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between fifty and sixty thousand people. Under the head of manufactures, we may mention that in addition to the leather trade in tanning and currying, is the making of fire-bricks and tiles, with a distillery, and several chemical works. Besides the famous Carron Works, which are the oldest and most extensive in Scotland, there are the Abbothaugh Iron Works, the Falkirk Iron Works, the Gowan Bank Iron Works, all in the immediate neighbourhood of the town, and the Camelon and Union Iron Works, about a mile to the west, the former being one of the oldest and most extensive works in the neighbourhood. There are various coal works in the vicinity, also several flour mills. The Union Canal joins the Forth and Clyde Canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company; it passes under ground, about half a mile south of the town, through a tunnel seven hundred and ninety-six yards in length.

Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I., afterwards a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I., but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of 'stent masters,' chosen by the different trades of the town managed its affairs till the present year, when that body was abolished by act of parliament, and their powers and property transferred to the magistrates. Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held as occasion requires; a sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slamaman, Larbert, Bothkennar and Airth.

The old church, founded by King Malcolm Canmore in 1057, was some years since taken down, and a new one, of the Gothic order, erected on its site; a tower, connected with the ancient structure was, however, permitted to retain its long-possessed position. In the church yard lie the bodies of Sir John de Graham (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298, whilst fighting for the independence of their country against Edward I.; two plain stones mark the spots of their interment. In the same cemetery stands the monument to two brave officers, Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, January 17th, 1746. Various sects of religionists have places of worship in Falkirk and neighbourhood; the situation of each, with their respective officiating ministers, are given in a subsequent page. A regular market for grain is held on Thursday; the town has also one of the best flesh markets in the country. Seven fairs are annually held for cattle and horses, viz., the last Thursday in January, the first Thursday in March, the third Thursday in May, the second Thursday in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the first Thursday in November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October), called feeing Thursdays, which are numerously attended. The three Falkirk trysts, supposed to be the largest cattle market in the kingdom, are held in the neighbourhood on the second Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays in August, September and October.

CARNOCK is a small district in the parish of St. Ninians, but in the postal delivery of Falkirk.

CAMELON is a village in the parish of Falkirk, situate on the road from Stirling to Falkirk, about a mile west from the latter town, on the line of the great canal; it consists chiefly of one tolerably well-built street. There are two nail manufactories of some importance, as well as the two foundries before mentioned, and likewise a boat building yard, while about half a mile further west is an extensive paraffin oil and tar distillery. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquarian, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city—in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian, and when subsequently possessed by the picts had twelve brazen gates; not a vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains, except one small portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The present village had its origin about eighty years back, and the sea is now about four miles distant from it.

CARRON is a village in the parish of Larbert, one and a half miles east therefrom, it is situated on the river Carron, and about two and a half miles from Falkirk (its post town). The immense iron works of the Carron Company, occupy almost the whole of the village.

CARRON SHORE, is a village at the extreme north-east of Larbert, about two miles therefrom, situated partly in that parish, and partly in that of Bothkennar, and about three miles from Falkirk (its post town). The river Carron passes the village—which contains a Mission church belonging to the Establishment, a Free Church school, and other schools. The Carron Company have numerous collieries around for supplying their works. Railways run in various directions from the works to these collieries, worked by their own locomotives.

LAURIESTON (or Lawristoun) is a considerable village in the parish of Falkirk, about one mile east from that town; a considerable proportion of the inhabitants are engaged in the same branch of industry (nail making) as those of Camelon, while others are employed in agricultural labours. This place was originally called Langtoun, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Lauriesto, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it.

The parish of BOTHKENNAR, about two miles long by an equal breadth, lies in the carse of Falkirk, and about three miles therefrom; it is a rich and fertile district, possessing some excellent orchards, and contains the Parish church and school. It is bounded on the north by the parish of Airth; on the west by the parish of Larbert; on the south by the parishes of Falkirk and Polmont; and on the east by the river Forth. Coal abounds in the parish, which is got to supply the Carron Company. On the Avon are the ruins of an old nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV.; and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient castle of Almond, for several generations the favourite seat of the Earls of Callander.

The parish of POLMONT is one of the richest and most beautiful districts in the country, with little exception, being arable land, finely enclosed and planted; it has the river Avon on its eastern boundary, and is intersected by the main road from Edinburgh to Falkirk and by the Union Canal and the Frith of Forth on the north. The parish, which extends five miles inland from the Forth, is about two miles in breadth, and has within its limits several coal works, and abounds in iron and freestone. The village of Polmont lies on the road to Falkirk (its post town), and from whence it is three miles and a half to the east. The small village of NETHER POLMONT is situate on the coast from Falkirk to Bo'ness, from which it is four miles distant.

REDDING is a district situated in this parish, abounding in coal mines, all of which are worked by the Redding Coal Company; there are several schools and a chapel for Methodists.

SLAMANAN parish lies on the south bank of the Avon, about seven miles from Falkirk (its post town) extending along the margin of that river, for about five miles, and from three to four miles in breadth. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which is a tributary to the great reservoir for the Clyde Canal. Near the north-west end of the parish, there is a point where the three shires of Stirling, Dumbarton and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet with the shire of Linlithgow. The parish contains the coal and paraffin oil works of Mr. John Minno.

FINTRY

IS a manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 41 miles from Edinburgh, 16 from Stirling, and about 24 from Glasgow (its post town); bounded on the north by Balfour and Gargunnock; on the east by St. Ninians and Kilryth; on the south by Campsie; and on the west by Killearn and Strathblane: extending from east to west 6 miles, and in breadth from north to south about 5 miles: it is pleasantly situate north of the Campsie Fells, and admirably calculated for a seat of manufactures from its healthful site and the abundant supply of water; the deficiency of coal, however, is a formidable obstacle to the establishment of works of magnitude, the nearest point from which this indispensable article can be obtained being at the distance of at least eight miles. The Culcreuch cotton-spinning mills, which employ many hands, are the only works in operation in this neighbourhood. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their sources in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which the celebrated 'Loup of Fintry,' a cataract of the Endrick descending ninety-one feet, is within the parish, and is particularly worthy of being visited. Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the 'Doun,' on which is a superb range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some fifty feet in length; among these may be observed several without any apparent interstices or joints; altogether they form an attractive object.

POST OFFICE, FINTRY, Elizabeth Freeland, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at half-past nine morning (Sundays excepted), and are despatched thereto at twelve noon.

GRANGEMOUTH

IS a very busy and thriving seaport, in the parish of Falkirk, 3 miles from that town, 27 from Edinburgh, and 25 from Glasgow; it is situated on the Frith of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Forth and Clyde canal. The formation of this place was commenced in 1777, by the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the accommodation of the shipping passing through the canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port. It is now a place of importance, and displays the enterprise of the British merchant in an eminent degree by its numerous and commodious quays, granaries, and warehouses for goods, and its capacious wet docks and basins for timber. It has also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock, bonded stores and timber yards; rope and sail making is extensively carried on, and there are saw mills and large collieries adjacent. The Commercial Bank has a branch here. There are two good school houses, one erected by the Earl of Zetland, to which a library is attached, the other built by subscription. The Earl of Zetland Hotel is an excellent commercial and posting house. The wet dock, opened in 1843, affording room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping, being found too small for the trade, a very large dock was added in 1859, and plans of a new one are now (1866) prepared. The growth of the port is no doubt attributable to the very moderate rate of charges, which are only twopence per ton register on the vessel, and one penny per ton on general goods, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage to enter the docks. The canal rates of toll are also low, and an abundant supply of lighters is always in the port. The area of basins for timber exceed 17 acres. A branch railway, which joins the North British, at Falkirk, was formed in 1859, thus putting the port in connection with the railway system of the country. There are large imports of timber, deals, grain, flax, &c. from Norway, Denmark, America, Prussia, and the Baltic in general, besides a considerable coasting trade. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Iceland, Copenhagen, Middlesbrough, Newcastle, &c. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway, with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with unrivalled advantages for the above imports of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the west of Scotland. Near the canal stands Kerse House, the seat of the Earl of Zetland. There is an Established church (a very neat structure lately erected), a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel.

POST OFFICE, GRANGEMOUTH, C. M'LAREN, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Falkirk) at ten morning and ten minutes before seven evening, and are despatched thereto at half-past six morning, at fifty minutes past two afternoon, and at fifty minutes past six evening.

KILLEARN,

AND THE VILLAGE OF GARTNESS.

KILLEARN is a village in the parish of its name, 50 miles W. from Edinburgh, 20 S.S.W. from Stirling, and nearly 17 N.W. from Glasgow; situate on the river Enrick, almost in the centre of the district, and in a pleasant part of the country, the parish is twelve miles long by an average breadth of two and a half miles, the river, with the parish of Balfron, forming its northern boundary; it is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane, and on the west by Drymen. Gentlemen's seats and pleasure grounds abound throughout the parish; and these, with the surrounding highly picturesque scenery, render the aspect of the locality most impressively agreeable. Considerable interest is also attached to this part of the county, as having been the birth-place or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland: in its more secluded recesses Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat; and in a much later age, Napier of Merchiston (inventor of the logarithms), when he was making his calculations, resided for some years at Gartness, a place to the west of Killearn, on the Endrick streams. It has an additional claim to the attention of the literary world from being, indisputably, the birth-place of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, whose name is deservedly famous all over Europe; he was born at a spot called the 'Moss,' a small farm-house on the bank of the water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn; the farm was the property of the distinguished author's father, and was for a long period possessed by persons of the name of Buchanan. A beautiful monument of white freestone was erected by the gentlemen of the parish and neighbourhood, in honour of the memory of their eminently gifted countryman: it is a well proportioned obelisk, nineteen feet square at the base, and one hundred and three feet in height above the ground; it stands in the village, and the expense of its erection was defrayed by voluntary subscription. Near the obelisk the Parochial church, a neat modern structure, has superseded the old place of worship, the ruins of which still remain. The land of the parish is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The minerals in this district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here; the woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. At GARTNESS, about two miles from Killearn, is a fall of water of about twelve feet, tumbling over a rock, which the salmon going up the river have to clear by a leap. Napier, the inventor of the logarithms, resided here for some years; near this are two manufactories for woollen cloths and felting.

POST OFFICE, KILLEARN, Isabella M'Lay, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at twenty minutes past seven morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past two afternoon.

KILSYTH,

AND THE VILLAGE OF BANTON.

KILSYTH is a considerable village, and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name, 35 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 15 S. from Sterling, between 12 and 13 N. from Glasgow, nearly 12 W. by S. from Falkirk, and 7 from Cumbernauld; situate on the main road leading to the three first named places. It is a straggling and irregularly built place; a considerable proportion of the inhabitants are employed, through the medium of resident agents, in weaving for Glasgow houses and resident manufacturers. The parish is abundantly stocked with coal and iron ore, vast quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron Iron-works near Falkirk, and to Gartsherrie and Langloan, near Coatbridge. The district is about seven miles in length, and three and a half in breadth. In form the parish is an irregular oblong, bounded by St. Ninians and Fintry on the North, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers: it also contains one of the reservoirs of the great canal. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingston, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial place of this family the bodies of the last Lady Kilsyth and her infant son, lay embalmed for many years. About the middle of the parish is a hill that exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. Besides the Parish church there are places of worship for members of the Free church, the United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics, and a sect called Morrisonians also meet in a Public Hall.

The burgh officers comprise the baron bailie, four councillors (who are elected only for a year), procurator and town-clerk, who sit daily if required, to dispose of summary cases only. A sheriff small debt court is also held quarterly on Thursdays. Branches of the City of Glasgow Bank, and the National Bank of Scotland are established in the village, also a Savings Bank. Fairs are held on the first Friday in April, and the third Friday in November.

BANTON and HIGH BANTON are small villages, situate about two and a half miles north-east of Kilsyth, in that parish, and about six miles south-west from Denny (its post town); a quoad sacra church is at Banton, and also a public school.

KIPPEN,

GARGUNNOCK, AND THE VILLAGE OF BUCHLYVIE.

KIPPEN is a village ten miles west from Stirling, situate in the eastern part of the parish of its name. The parish, is eight miles in length by from two to four in breadth, and is bounded on the north by the river Forth, on the east by Gargunnock, on the south by Balfron, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it lies partly in the county of Stirling, and partly in that of Perth; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an expansive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented to the eye of the spectator. Kippen villages possesses two churches—an elegant one belonging to the Establishment, and a Free church. Near the railway station is the historically celebrated Ford of Frew, where in 1746 Prince Charles lost his cannon, while retreating before the Campbells. Mineral wells are situated in the neighbourhood. A quarry of red stone is also near the village. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December.

BUCHLYVIE is a village in the parish of Kippen, situated four and a half miles therefrom, and contains three places of worship, a quoad sacra, belonging to the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. From PORT of MONTEITH station, the tourist may proceed to the lake of Monteith, in which are situated the Islands of Inchnahome and Falla, on the former of which will be found the ruins of a large monastery, founded by King Egbert, in 825; many historical associations are connected with it, among which may be mentioned that, Queen Mary, retired thither after the battle of Pinkie, and planted a boxwood bower, a part of which still remains. It was here that Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his 'Lady of the Lake.' Ardgibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held in Buchlyvie on the 26th of June and 18th of November; and on Balgair Muir, in the same parish, extensive fairs for cattle are held on the last Tuesday in March, the 10th of May, and on the Friday before the 26th of June.

GARGUNNOCK is a parish which extends six miles in length, by four in breadth; bounded on the east and south by St. Ninians, on the west by Fintry, Balfron and Kippin, and on the north by Kincardine. As regards its agricultural features and capabilities, it is divided into two districts; one of which, on the south, is hilly and pastoral; and the other belongs to a flat carse land which spreads from the town of Stirling, in a south-westerly direction, towards the county of Dumbarton. A church of the Establishment and a Free church are in the village, which stands on the side of a hill on the south edge of the carse alluded to, about four miles from Kippen. The river Forth divides the parish from Perthshire.

LARBERT,

AND THE VILLAGE OF STENHOUSE-MUIR.

LARBERT, or Larbet, is a parish—the village, three miles from Falkirk (its post town) and eight from Stirling, is beautifully situated on the side of a hill on the northern bank of the Carron. The parish (with which that of DUNIPACE is incorporated), contains some gentlemen's seats of the first class, among which is Kinnaird, once the residence and property of Bruce, celebrated for his travels in Abyssinia, who was born, died and buried in this parish; his remains lie interred in the parish churchyard; a monument of iron, cast at CARRON, is erected over his grave. At the Reformation, an ancestor of this enterprising traveller repaired and preached in the old church. The present place of worship is a handsome modern erection, with a square tower. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. The famous Falkirk cattle tryst is held on a moor in this parish, in the month of October, when twenty to thirty thousand head of cattle, and near one thousand sheep are exposed for sale. The Established Church is in the village, and a Sessional school.

In 1863, at NORTH BROOMAGE (a district about one mile from the village of Larbert) was erected two handsome buildings, forming one institution, which bears the name of the Scottish National Institution for the education of Imbecile Children. The buildings are after the design of the continental ecclesiastical architecture. One of these buildings is a charitable one, the other is for the reception of patients, whose friends contribute for their support.

STENHOUSE-MUIR is a small and neat village, situated about half a mile east of Larbert, in the same parish, and contains a Free church and a Parochial and Free church school.

POST OFFICE, LARBERT, Margaret Gilliespie, Post Mistress—Letters from all parts arrive (from Falkirk) at a quarter past ten morning, and are despatched thereto at six evening; on Sundays at ten minutes before eleven morning.

LENNOXTOWN AND CLACHAN OF CAMPSIE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF BALDERNOCK, CAMPSIE, STRATHBLANE, MILTON OF CAMPSIE AND TORRANCE.

LENNOXTOWN, or NEWTOWN of CAMPSIE, is a large village in the parish of Campsie, 42 miles W. from Edinburgh, 22 S.S.W. from Stirling, and 9 N.N.W. from Glasgow, and is situated at the terminus of the Campsie Branch Line of railway; the length of the parish is about seven miles, and its breadth about six miles; it is bounded on the north by the parish of Fintry, by Baldernock and Strathblane on the west, on the south by Cadder and Kirkintilloch, and on the east by Kilsyth. In the village is the extensive calico printing establishment of Messrs. R. Dalglish, Falconer & Co., and some smaller works of the same kind; the Hurlet and Campsie Alum Works are in this parish, and there are also bleachfields and collieries in the vicinity. There is also an excellent hotel within one minutes walk from the railway station. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts is held at the Lennox Arms Hotel on the last Thursdays in February, May, August and November. An Established church, with a square tower, is situated in a commanding position near the centre of the village; there are also neat places of worship belonging to the Free church, the United Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. Several schools are attached to these places of worship. The parish of Campsie lies in the central part of the county, and extends eight miles in length by seven in breadth; it is composed of a fertile strath or valley, bounded by ranges of the Campsie hills or fells on the north, which are elevated about fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea. The CLACHAN, or town of Campsie, as it is designated, is distant about a mile from Lennoxtown, and stands on the low grounds at the foot of the far-famed Campsie glen, which from its romantic scenery and waterfalls, is a place of great resort in the summer. The proprietor courteously grants permission to strangers to perambulate the grounds. The district is likewise the residence of several persons of distinction, and ornamented by some elegant seats; those of Woodhead and Craigbaronet are perhaps the most conspicuous. The rivers Kelvin and Glazart pass through this parish, which is also intersected by the two great road from Kippin to Glasgow, and from the latter city to Edinburgh.

The small village of TORRANCE, in the parish of Campsie, or, as it is generally called, the Torrance of Campsie, is about three and a half miles from Lennoxtown, on the direct road to Glasgow.

BALDERNOCK, a parish [anciently Bathernoch] is situated in the southern extremity of the county, where it is bounded by the river Kelvin and Allander, on the side fronting north-east, and by Campsie; and on the south-west lies the Loch of Baldowie. The parish abounds with cairns, and similar memorials of early warfare. The most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated 'the auld wife's lift,' it consists of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and upon the top of these the third is placed, in the same direction, with their ends pointed north and south; the whole are eighteen feet in length, by eleven in breadth, and seven in depth. In the surrounding grounds the roots and stumps of oak trees have been dug up; and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove, and place of sacrifice and wisdom.

STRATHBLANE parish, as its name implies, composes the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-western course through it; the land of the valley is exceedingly fertile, and is embellished by several neat villas, while the hills are clothed with natural woods. The parish lies in the south-west corner of the county, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Campsie; on the south by Baldernock and East Kilpatrick, and on the west and north by Killearn. The village of Strathblane is three miles and a half west from the Clachan of Campsie, and five east from Killearn. There is the extensive calico-print works, of the Blanefield Printing Company, situated in the valley. About one mile to the west are the ruins of Duntreath Castle; and two miles south-east are the ruins of Mugdock Castle, the property of the Duke of Montrose. A branch of railway from Campsie is now [1866] in course of construction, which, when completed, will afford a very pleasant journey through this delightful country.

MILTON or MILTON OF CAMPSIE, as it is generally called, is a small village situated two miles east of Lennoxtown, in the parish of Campsie, there are two printworks in the neighbourhood; the village contains a public school, and there is a station on the Campsie branch railway.

ST. NINIANS, BANNOCKBURN, CAMBUSBARRON, EAST PLEAN, WINS OF MILTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ST. NINIANS is a considerable village or town in the parish of its name, about one mile from Stirling, situate on the road from that town to Glasgow; the form of the parish is irregular in its extent, but may be computed at a medium of about 10 miles from east to west, and about 6 miles from north to south, bounded on the east by the parish of Airth; on the south by Larbert, Dunipace, and Denny; on the west by Fintry and Gargunnock; on the north by the river Forth (which separates it from Kincardine, Lecropt, Logie, and Alloa (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted); it derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient parish church, the steeple of which still remains, and is a distinguished curiosity. The church to which this fabric was formerly attached being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was accidently blown up immediately before their retreat to the north; though scarcely a stone of the body of the church was left upon another, the steeple remained uninjured. The town consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned; upon many are dates of considerable antiquity, and some of them have stones upon which various characters and implements are rudely and grotesquely carved. The dwellings, however, are for the most part whitewashed, which imparts a more lively appearance to the place; and well cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. St. Ninians has long been famed for the manufacture of nails; other staples are the tanning of leather, and the manufacture of screw bolts.

CAMBUSBARRON is a village in the parish of St. Ninians, situate one mile north-west from that place, and about the same distance west from Stirling. An extensive woollen mill has been erected here by Messrs. R. Smith & Son, which gives employment to the bulk of the inhabitants. In the immediate neighbourhood there are also some extensive lime kilns belonging to the Murray's Hall Lime Company.

BANNOCKBURN is a prosperous manufacturing village in the parish of St. Ninians, one mile from that town, situate on both sides (but chiefly on the east bank) of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles drops into the Forth. Few places of its size in Scotland have more rapidly improved of late years, in consequence of the manufactures that have taken their seat here; these consist of tweeds, tartans, and carpets to a considerable extent. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance; and a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district the country is characterised by long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Frith of Forth; and it was on one of these uplands, betwixt the village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought, on the 24th of July, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn, the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland against the ambition of the English monarchy; in this conflict the army of the latter was defeated with a loss of thirty thousand men and seven hundred knights. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies' Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greysteil and the village of St. Ninians; about half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Caldan Hill, is a large stone, termed the 'Bored Stone,' having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. About half a mile above the village of Bannockburn, at MILTON, is pointed out the remains of the miller's house to which James III retreated from the battle of Sauchieburn (fought in 1488), about two miles further to the south-west, which occasioned the death of that monarch. Two fairs are held at Bannockburn—on the second Tuesday of June and October (old style). About three miles from Bannockburn is the village of EAST PLEAN, containing an hospital for the accommodation and maintenance of old and indigent old men, more especially soldiers and sailors. Colonel Francis Simpson, of East Plean, who died in 1831, is the donor, having bequeathed upwards of £3,000 for the purpose. The establishment contains thirty-three inmates, who are fed, clothed, and have a small allowance of pocket money; the trustees have lately granted land on which a church has been erected.

STIRLING,

CAMBUSKENNETH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STIRLING is an ancient town, the capital of the county and parish of its name, and a royal and parliamentary burgh; 35 miles W. by N. from Edinburgh, 28 N. by E. from Glasgow, 33½ S. W. from Perth, 11 N. W. from Falkirk, 7 W. from Alloa, and 6 S. from Dunblane. Like the old town of Edinburgh, Stirling is situate on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous end of which, towards the west, is occupied by the castle. The prospects from hence are most delightful, and also extensive; towards the east, especially, they are highly beautified by the windings of the Forth, the ruins of the abbey of Cambuskenneth, lately renovated and ornamented at great expense, the Abbey Craig, with Wallace's monument on the summit, and the City of Edinburgh in the distance as far as the eye can reach. While the situation of Stirling is thus one of the most pleasing and picturesque in the country, it is a place noted for its antiquities and the historical associations connected with them. The origin of the name of Stirling is shrouded in great uncertainty: in all the old records it is entitled Stryveline or Stryveling, a word of obscure etymology, which has been modified into Sterling and Stirling—the latter its now accepted appellation. The town standing, as it does, on the declivity of a hill, the streets are consequently in general clean; the principal streets are Broad-street, King-street, Port-street, Murray place, and Baker-street. Broad-street is of a spacious and imposing appearance, lying along the inclined plane like the High-street of Edinburgh; there are, leading towards the castle, several diverging streets and several good hotels and inns, the principal of which are the Golden Lion Hotel, in King-street, conducted by Duncan Campbell; and the Royal Hotel, in Barnton place, conducted by Archibald Campbell, both combining comfort and economy, with strict attention to the wants of visitors, whether families or commercial gentlemen. Great improvements have of late years been effected, both in the town and suburbs. There has lately sprung up in the Southfield and Spittals Park, the property of Spittals Hospital, what may be called the west end of the town. A large area is being quickly covered with beautiful urban villas, squares and crescents, and these all being in the immediate neighbourhood of the King's Park, renders them very pleasant places of residence. The approaches to the town, on every side, are truly grand, and probably equalled by few (and exceeded by none) in Scotland; large sums have been expended upon the main streets, and to good purpose; for few towns now are better paved, or lighted with purer gas, than Stirling; it is also well supplied with excellent water, brought to the town from a distance of about three miles; the expense of accomplishing these different objects (except the water) is defrayed by the public, or, as it is termed, 'common good,' without assessing any one; so that Stirling is perhaps one of the cheapest towns for residence, as well as one of the most beautiful, in the three kingdoms. The town-house, which stands in Broad-street, has a lofty tower, with a clock and a set of musical chimes; behind it is the gaol, here, likewise are the court-rooms, and an apartment for the court of justiciary, which sits twice a year; efforts are being made to have a new court-house more in keeping with the size and importance of the county, and it is expected that such will be soon erected. At the top of King-street is the Athenæum, a handsome edifice with a fine lofty spire and a clock, which has four faces; the ground flats are converted into shops; in the upper is a reading-room and extensive library, comprising upwards of seven thousand volumes of ancient and modern literature; the front of the building is circular, thus giving a much greater facility to the entrance of the two streets which branch out here. There is also a school of arts, to which a library of nearly two thousand volumes is attached. There is also a reading-room with library, and a small museum in King-street, called the 'Macfarlane Library and Museum;' John Macfarlane, Esq. of Coneyhill, maintains it solely at his own expense. As was the case with Edinburgh, Stirling arose as a suburb in continguity with the castle; the latter stands on a basaltic rock, and around it is a pleasant walk, carried from the town, in many places cut out of the solid rock; from this walk are several beautifully interesting views, and it affords an excellent opportunity for examining the basaltic pillars of which the rock is composed. On the south side of the castle is a flat enclosed piece of ground, called 'the Valley;' it was the spot were tournaments were held, and on one side is a place where the ladies used to sit to witness the feats of valour of the combatants, which is still designated 'the ladies' rock'. This piece of ground is now tastefully laid out as a cemetery, and is quite in keeping with the beautiful scenery by which it is environed; it contains several handsome monuments, chiefly of the martyrs of the reformation. On the low ground immediately below this rock is situated the 'King's garden,' a moderately sized field, completely surrounded by a canal, now filled up; in the midst of which is a curious artificial mound, of octagonal form, called the 'King's knot,' which appears to have been a miniature of a regularly fortified place, but which tradition recognises as the scene of some forgotten play or recreation, that the king, with his court, was accustomed to enjoy here. The palace, which is within the castle walls, is a stately structure, externally in the form of a square, and very richly and curiously ornamented with grotesque figures, standing upon pillars or pedestals, in good preservation. For several centuries Stirling Castle was little else than a single tower; at the end of the eleventh century it rose into consequence, and in the course of the succeeding century it attained the distinction of being one of the four principal fortresses in the kingdom; such it continued during the sanguinary and protracted contest which Edward I. of England, commenced for the subjugation of Scotland, when it was frequently taken and re-taken, after tedious seiges, and under circumstances which prove its great strength and importance at that period. In the course of that eventful struggle between independence and usurpation, Stirling and its vicinity formed the theatre of some of the most brilliant achievents of Sir William Wallace; of these none was so remarkable as the battle of Stirling, fought on 13th September, 1297, in which the English army was signally defeated with great slaughter. Stirling castle first became a favourite residence of royalty about the reign of James I., whose son, James II., was born in it. In the reign of Queen Anne the fortifications of the castle were considerably extended; and it is declared, in the articles of treaty of union with England, to be one of the four fortresses in Scotland which were ever after to be kept in repair. Since that period it has experienced little change in external aspect, except its being gradually rendered more and more a modern barracks for the accommodation of soldiers. It is commanded by a fort major and subalterns; it has an appointed chaplain, and a barrack master, who is likewise storekeeper. Perhaps one of the most interesting places in the castle is a room in the west building of the quadrangle, known as the "Douglas room," so called from being the apartment in which William, eighth Earl of Douglas, was killed with a dagger by the hand of King James the second. On the evening of the 18th of November, 1855, it was almost destroyed by fire, but since it has been as nearly as possible restored to its original appearance; from wood saved from the fire mementoes have been made, which are readily bought by tourists, and on the occasion of the visit of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales to Stirling in 1864, the Princess was graciously pleased to accept from Mr. Crawford, bookseller, a copy of the 'Lady of the Lake,' handsomely bound in the oak of the Douglas room.

Stirling as a royal burgh is one of high antiquity, having received its charter from Alexander I. It is governed by a provost, who is also high sheriff, the only provost in Scotland holding this important office, four bailies, who are also sheriffs, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, who are elected according to the terms of the Scottish burgh reform bill, which has also enlarged the limits of the burgh in as far as the parliamentary elective franchise is concerned; and for that purpose it comprehends St. Ninians, and other small villages and hamlets. The burgh, in connection with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to parliament. Being the county town, the courts of the sheriff are held here, and are attended by a number of procurators resident in the place. The chief manufactures of Stirling are carpets, tartans, and shawls for which it has been long noted, and these branches engage a considerable number of weavers, a large wool spinning factory, lately erected, and two coach making establishments, which employ several hundred workmen; and the other leading avocations are tanning, nail making, and agricultural implement making. There are seven banking establishments settled here; they are branches respectively of the 'Bank of Scotland,' 'National Bank of Scotland,' the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' the 'Clydesdale Bank,' the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' and the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' besides a 'National Security Savings' Bank.' Some shipping trade is carried on, and at certain periods of the tide, steam vessels from Granton afford a cheap, expeditious and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

The Stirling Tract depot (Peter Drummond's, is a handsome building, erected at a cost of nearly £5,000, situated at the corner of King street, and Murray place; it forms a prominent feature from the style of architecture, which is a combination of modern Italian, with some of the more picturesque features of early Norman. The windows of the ground storey are crowned with heads sculptured in stone, of Luther, Wycliffe, Knox, Guthrie, Whitfield and Chalmers—provision has been made for handing over the whole property to trustees for its permanent maintenance as an Evangelistic agency.

Near to the castle are two churches of the Establishment, besides which there is one in Murray place in the Norman style of architecture, and there are several others belonging to various sects of Dissenters. A handsome Free church has been erected also in Murray place. A monument, in the Grecian style of architecture, has been erected in front of the United Presbyterian chapel, St. John street, in memory of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the first seceders from the Establishment, at a cost of upwards of £500. In 1856, a Poor House, Hospital and Lunatic Asylum were erected at a cost of £7,000. Several charitable institutions are established here. Stirling has long been celebrated for its schools and hospitals; some of the latter are foundations of long standing and are well endowed—their titles and localities will be found under their appropriate head. Two newspapers are issued from the press of this town every week, namely, the 'Stirling Observer' on Thursday, and the 'Stirling Journal and Advertiser' on Friday, both having cheap Saturday reprints. They are papers of considerable repute, and deservedly enjoy a large share of patronage. Stirling, long the seat of Scottish kings, and the classic site of the most interesting scenes in Scottish history, is now the peaceful centre of the richest and best cultivated district in Scotland. Three miles from Stirling are the mineral springs of Airthrie, rapidly and deservedly rising into notice; they are situate in a charming locality, close beside the Bridge of Allan, now a large and thriving village, containing many elegant mansions and villas, and as a watering place, vies with Tunbridge and Harrogate. On the Abbey Craig, a distance of two miles east from Stirling, has been erected the Wallace monument, a noble structure to the memory of Sir William Wallace, seen from all sides at a great distance, and fitly built on the craig on which Wallace's army encamped the night before the battle of Stirling Bridge. There are four charities or mortifications connected with the town of Stirling, particulars of which are given in the list of public buildings, &c.

A weekly market is held at Stirling every Friday. The fairs are held on the first Friday in February, for horses; the last Fridays in May, for cattle and horses; the first Fridays, in March, April, May and August, for cattle; the third Friday in October and the second Friday in December, for hiring servants. The Corn Exchange, situated near the Athenæum, is a large and commodious structure, used as a market place, and is the property of the burgh.

Cambuskenneth is a small village in the parish of Logie, county of Clackmannan, situate opposite to Stirling, on the north side of the river Forth, on one of the peninsulas formed by the windings of the river, near to which is the fall and desolate ruin of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded by David I., in 1147, and once a pile of great magnitude. Within the precincts of the abbey, James III., and his queen were interred; during some excavations recently made among the ruins, the royal remains were discovered, and were afterwards re-interred, and a beautiful tombstone now marks the spot, erected at the expense of Her Majesty, in memory of her ancestors.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is a Highland county, and one of the most northerly districts in Scotland. Its form presents five sides, that on the east being bounded by Caithness-shire for about thirty-seven miles; that on the south and south-west by Ross-shire; that on the south and south-east, for a distance of thirty-three miles, by the Moray Frith; and its sides on the west and north are washed by the Atlantic and the North Sea. The area of the shire is computed to comprise 1,207,188 statute acres: of this large territory a small portion only may be taken as cultivated.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of one uninterrupted succession of wild mountains, valleys, and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets of the sea and bay, and variegated by imposing promontories, among which latter Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt, and Sutherland; the first named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided, naturally, into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle, and the Western: the first is a level narrow stripe of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from three hundred to eight hundred feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet, and Oickel; and the western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is still more wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountain of greatest altitude in the shire is that of Glaschean, which rises 2,000 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland which was subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of that civilisation which had been so beneficially spread over the rest of Britain. The great barrier which impeded improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two powerfully moving circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement:—the first was the extraordinary and patriotic exertions made by the noble family of Sutherland and Stafford; and the second was the well-judged liberality of parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. When it was proposed to place turnpike gates on the principal line the noble proprietor said, 'It will shut out the thoroughfare of passengers, of which we have too few; and, regarding the tenantry, I see no benefit in lowering rents with one hand, while, with the other, I impose tolls upon them.' Thus under the fostering care of the late Duke of Sutherland, as well as that of the Duchess, the aspect of the county has been most agreeably changed. Sufficient praise cannot be given to the lady, who has encouraged the building of neat cottages in the English style, and introduced a taste for cleanliness and propriety of appearance, by premiums in money, and a most becoming patronage in different ways. The breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and finely swelling green hills, as well as its climate (which is superior to that of Caithness-shire), eminently adapt it. Under the various improvements of store farming, the county rears 200,000 Cheviot sheep, of which 20,000 are annually exported, besides 80,000 fleeces of wool. From the fishing stations on the coast the county annually exports from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels of herrings, besides cod, ling, &c. Nor is the business of tillage neglected: the agriculture of the shire is now equal to that of the Lothians; and the soil, being of sandy open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of grain. The exports of farm produce, &c., have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland. The building of houses, bridges, and other edifices, has been greatly facilitated by the abundance of sandstone, limestone, and slate, found in different parts of the county. The principal rivers are the Brora, Borgie, Naver, Helmsdale, Holladale, Laxford, Inchard, Inver, Shin, the Strath-Fleet, Strathmore, and Gruke. A line of Railway is in course of construction, to be called the Sutherlandshire Railway, commencing at the terminus of the Highland Railway at Bonar Bridge, and passing through Lairg and Golspie, terminating at Brora; it is intended that it shall be completed in the spring of 1867.

Sutherlandshire comprises thirteen parishes, and part of one other. It contains only one town—Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in returning one member; and the county at large sends another.

DORNOCH,

CLASHMORE AND BONAR BRIDGE IN CREICH.

DORNOCH is a small town and royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and of the county of Sutherland, nine miles from Tain (by the Meikle Ferry and twenty-nine round by Bonar Bridge), and twelve and a half from Golspie, healthfully and pleasantly situated near the mouth of the river Portnaculter, now generally called the Firth of Dornoch, and opposite to Tain, which lies on the south side of the estuary. Dornoch is an ancient place, it was the residence of the bishops of Caithness even before the twelfth century; the cathedral church was then erected here by Bishop Gilbert Moray, but, in the year 1570, some hostile tribes of the neighbouring country took advantage of the minority of Alexander, Earl of Sutherland, made a sudden irruption into the town, and among other barbarous acts set fire to the venerable edifice, after a desperate resistance by the inhabitants, who succeeded, however, in preserving the old tower that still remains. On the 5th November, 1605 (the day of the discovery of the gunpowder plot), a range of handsome stone pillars which supported some Gothic arches that had escaped destruction, were prostrated by a violent gale of wind. In 1614 the Earl of Sutherland commenced the repair of a part of the cathedral, and subsequent alterations converted it into an ordinary plain church; but during the year (1836) the late Duchess Countess of Sutherland restored the structure to its original dimensions and Gothic proportions; and now, with its projecting abutments and arched windows (all carefully copied from the remaining fragment of the edifice), and adorned with Gothic groinings along the lofty and long roof of the aisles, the Dornoch cathedral is the handsomest erection of its kind in the north of Scotland. The remains of the late Duke of Sutherland repose in the east aisle, where is placed a beautiful marble statue of that deeply lamented nobleman, executed by Chantrey, also a tablet to the late Duchess. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains; but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its comparative importance since the triumph of the reformation.

Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628; and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with six councillors; in connection with certain other burghs before named, it enjoys a parliamentary representation. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county, and to the free navigation of the Firth being obstructed by the same bar of dangerous sandbanks mentioned in the account of Tain. Of late years some extensive buildings have been erected, regular and neat; two of these are very handsome, one contains the town and county room, sheriff clerk's room, &c.; the other the town and county gaol and house for the gaoler, and also a very neat police station for the county. There are Parochial and Free church schools, and another for young girls, endowed by Lady Glenorchy, who was maternal aunt to the Marchioness of Stafford. The neighbourhood of Dornoch is very pleasant, and a short distance hence are some good sea-bathing stations. Within four miles, situate on rising ground, is the neat and picturesque castle of Skelbo, erected by the late Duke of Sutherland, as a home farm and rural retreat during the residence of his grace in the north; it is now in the tenancy of its former manager, Mr. T. Barclay. The scenery about here is very diversified, and combines the home grounds laid out with the best taste, and surrounded by distant spots alternately romantic, and beautifully picturesque, with wood and water, hill and dale.

There are two public fairs or markets held annually in the town, one on the first Thursday in November, and the other on the first Wednesday in December. These fairs were formerly wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country; but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places, and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, these fairs are but thinly attended. The railway will in a short time be extended from Bonar Bridge to Golspie, it will pass through a portion of the parish of Dornoch, but distant about seven miles from the town.

CLASHMORE is a modern and thriving village, about three miles west from Dornoch, situated partly on the estate of Sutherland and partly on that of Skibo, being divided only by a small burn which separates these properties, and by the parliamentary road to Caithness, which passes through the village. A neat and comfortable inn, the Sutherland Arms, affords every accommodation required by visitors; it was erected some years since by the Duchess Countess of Sutherland, at an expense of £1,000 sterling, and is much frequented by noblemen, gentlemen, and travellers. Within half a mile from the village is the beautiful seat and residence of Mr. Thomas Chirnside, of Skibo; on the site of this mansion there formerly, for centuries, stood a castle, with a garrison, under the charge of a general officer as governor; around it many bloody conflicts took place, but its retension having become unnecessary in these peaceful times, it was demolished, and the present castle of modern architecture, erected in its stead. The celebrated, noble, and brave, but ill-fated Marquis of Montrose, in the year 1650, lodged two nights as a prisoner in the Castle of Skibo, after his unfortunate defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by the avaricious and treacherous Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who basely betrayed, and delivered him up to his enemies. A fair is held on the Monday after the first Wednesday in May.

BONAR BRIDGE is a considerable village in the parish of Creich, fifteen miles west from Tain, and thirteen miles from Dornoch, situate on the great north mail road, and on the north side of the Firth of Dornoch, which is here crossed by an elegant iron bridge, erected by government at a cost of £13,971. Fairs are held in the village on the third Tuesdays in July, August and September.

MAIL

To WICK and THURSO, the Royal Mail (from Bonar Bridge), calls at the Sutherland Arms, every evening at ten minutes before eight, and again at half-past four morning, on its southward journey to join the railway at Bonar Bridge; goes through Golspie, Helmsdale, &c.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY.

The Meikle Ferry Railway Station is distant from the town of Dornoch seven miles, but access to it necessitates the crossing of the ferry. The Bonar Bridge Station is distant fourteen miles.

GOLSPIE,

BRORA, HELMSDALE, ROGART, CLYNE, AND LOTH.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter neat and respectable, is eleven miles from Dornoch and twenty from Tain; pleasantly situated on the east coast of the county. Before the commencement of the present century, Golspie was principally inhabited by fishermen, but it is now the most important and prosperous village in the shire. The great parliamentary road passes through it, and, besides the north mail daily, mail gigs, upon a construction to carry passengers, start from the hotel three times a week for Tongue, Assynt, and Scourie. A branch of the 'Aberdeen Town and County Bank,' and another of the 'British Linen Company,' are established here. A convenient pier, accessible at low water, constructed in the safe harbour of the little ferry (three miles and a half distant), is a valuable improvement to the village and its neighbourhood, and two very excellent hotels are other conveniences possessed by this respectable village. A line of railway is in course of construction, to be called the 'Sutherlandshire Railway,' commencing at the terminus of the Highland Line at Bonar, passing through Lairg and Golspie, terminating at Brora. It is expected to be completed about the spring of 1867. The Parish church, a small but convenient building, erected in 1619, and kept in good repair, stands within a well-enclosed burial ground, surrounded by thriving trees; and at the west end of the village the Free church is situated: schools are in connexion with both these places of worship. Golspie owes its increasing prosperity to its eligible situation in the centre of the arable district, and to the direct communication established between it and the distant west and north coasts. The vicinage of Golspie is peculiarly distinguished and adorned by Dunrobin Castle, the chief and princely seat of the Duke of Sutherland, situated within a mile of the village. This castle is known to have existed in the twelfth century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family fortalice of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland. Of its ancient appearance it has almost become divested, and given place to a particularly chaste and characteristic style of architecture. The principal entrance is through a long avenue of trees, terminating which the noble building bursts upon the sight. The view from the castle's summit is remarkably fine, and comprises all that can give effect to a delightful landscape—including the tastefully laid out gardens and grounds, the finely wooded burn, and waterfall in Dunrobin Glen, and the picturesque mountain of Ben-Bhraggie, towering over all to the height of thirteen hundred feet. Upon the summit of this eminence has been placed a lofty monument to the memory of the late Duke of Sutherland. The interior of the castle is no less to be admired than the beauties that surround it; and the works of art with which it is decorated are various and costly—the paintings especially are of the first merit; while the apartments altogether are magnificent in their furniture and dimensions. The view from the sea likewise possesses great interest: the building from this point is seen to great advantage—exhibiting its noble tiers of balconies, and numerous spires, its windows of stained glass, its gardens and beautiful fountains, &c. Near the village a handsome memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription, to perpetuate the remembrance of the many virtues of that noble lady.

BRORA is a village in the parish of CLYNE, about twelve miles from Helmsdale and five from Golspie. Its trade is of a domestic nature; the curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood. The parish is large, being twenty-four miles in length by from four to eight in breadth—extending inland to Strathbog, through which flows a tributary to the Brora water, a narrow and rapid stream, abounding with excellent salmon. Two fairs are held, one on the second Thursday of October, and the other on the Friday after first Wednesday in May.

HELMSDALE is a modern village in the parish of KILDONAN, 37 miles S. by W. from Wick, and 64 N.N.E. (by land) from Tain; situated at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward. The houses are substantial, the streets are regular, and its harbour is excellent; during the season for the herring fishery large fleets of boats resort here. The places for curing are the most complete and the best adapted on the coast for pursuing this branch to a great extent. The river that flows through the extensive strath of Kildonan abounds with salmon. Just opposite the town stand the ruins of an old castle, which serve as a landmark to mariners. The places of worship are two churches—one of the Establishment, the other a Free church; the schools are those in connection with them, and also one for young ladies.

LOTH is a parish on Dornoch Frith, 10 miles N.E. of Brora; in length it is about 14 miles. The last person who suffered death for reputed witchcraft was burnt here about 1720. A Parochial school and an Established church are in the village.

WIGTONSHIRE.

THIS county which forms the western part of the ancient district of Galloway, occupies the south-western extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright (or Eastern Galloway), also by Wigton Bay; on the south and west it is girded by the Irish Sea, and on the north by the county of Ayr. The extent of the shire from north to south is about thirty miles, and (including Luce Bay) its breadth from east to west about the same: the superficial contents of the county (adopting a medium calculation betwixt conflicting authorities) may be taken at four hundred and eighty square miles, or three hundred and nine thousand, seven hundred and sixty statute acres—of which about one half, perhaps, is cultivated. The Bay of Luce indents the land to the extent of fifteen miles and forms two promontories; at the southern extremity of the western projection is the Mull of Galloway, while the apex of the eastern is called Burrow Head; these two peninsular headlands are also known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyns or Rinos) of Galloway. On the north of the county, another promontory is formed by the intersection of Loch Ryan. In ordinary language the district is divided into Upper and Lower Galloway, which designates the northern or high, and the southern or low parts of the shire.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the epoch of the Roman power obtruding itself into North Britain, the ancient British tribe of the Novantes inhabited the whole of Eastern and Western Galloway, having Leucophibia (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and Rerigonium (Loch Ryan), for their principal port. The Anglo-Saxons over-ran the district in the sixth century; and Oswie, the Northumbrian king settled at Whithorn. During the ninth and tenth centuries the country on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man; and hence the name of Galloway, or 'the country of the Gael,' was conferred on the territory. About the twelfth century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary contests which originated in the competition of Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct: it was revived, however, and now bestows an Earldom on the distinguished family of Stewart and Garlies. The Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners, and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Whilst these distinctions remained the inhabitants were conspicuous for rudeness bordering on ferocity. Their chief derived his authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftain and his vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours, inflicting the mischiefs of reckless incursions into the territories of those that had the misfortune to dwell in the proximity of these half civilized marauders.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from the encumbrance of rocks. The best lands lie near the shores— the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of an hazel colour, and is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year, usually accompanied with rains; yet, when proper attention is exercised by the agriculturist, the moisture of the climate is but seldom injurious to the products of the earth: snow rarely lies long, and frosts are not generally severe or of tedious duration. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively: it is said that, during twenty years, the Earl of Stair annually planted twenty thousand trees. The salutary improvements that have been effected in the agriculture of this county have been, with some justice, ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries; the spirit and practice of husbandry gradually spread from that shire to Kirkcudbright, and thence from Ayrshire, penetrated into Wigtonshire: since that period, rents have risen rapidly; and corn and other products of tillage, black cattle, wool, sheep, and swine, are now largely exported. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool. The mineral resources of this county are by no means extensive: there is no coal, at least for any useful purpose; and although there is plenty of iron ore, the absence of the former article renders the latter of comparatively little value; in the northern part of the 'Rhinns' the existence of sandstone has been ascertained; quarries of slate, of different qualities, are found in various places; and lead mines were formerly wrought within the district. The shipping trade of Wigtonshire has felt, like all maritime counties, the impetus of steam navigation The ports of Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn derive considerable benefit from this mighty power; and till recently Portpatrick was the station for the mail steam packets communicating with Ireland: the removal of which to Glasgow and Greenock has been a severe blow to the prosperity of this interesting little port. The coasting trade of this county is considerable and is steadily increasing, giving employment to a large number of mariners. In 1688 the number of boats belonging to this shire was four, and in 1866 this insignificant number is augmented to hundreds. There is also considerable activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, so that, combining the various sources of agriculture, commerce and the fisheries, Wigtonshire may be pronounced an active and prosperous county.

RIVERS AND MOUNTAINS.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtonshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton-Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of twenty-four miles, falls into Wigtown Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake, in Ayrshire, and after a course of twenty-one miles, unites with the Bladenoch. The mountains with their elevations above the level of the sea, are, Lang, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020; Knock of Luce, 1,014; and Barhullion, 814. On the Line of Railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick, Newton-Stewart, Glenluce, Stranraer, and Portpatrick, possess stations; this important line opens out extensive facilities for communication with other important towns and counties.

Wigtonshire comprehends seventeen parishes, and has three royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, WIGTOWN, STRANRAER and WHITHORN; with these is associated New Galloway in returning one member to Parliament, and the county at large sends another. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton-Stewart, Garlieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce, and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small sea ports or natural harbours; and is ornamented by many handsome mansions and elegant seats of its nobility and gentry.

GARLIESTON & SORBIE.

GARLIESTON is a sea-port village in the parish of Sorbie, finely situated at the head of Garlieston bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigtown bay). From the pier-head the Ross light bears S. E. by E. For distances—See Sorby. The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour capable of receiving a great number of vessels; the tide at the spring flow, rises eighteen feet. A regular communication is now maintained between this port and Liverpool, by the 'Countess of Galloway' steam packet, once a fortnight, and there are traders occasionally. The Broughton and Poutenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Galloway House, a fine mansion, the seat of the Earl of Galloway, erected in 1740, is adjacent on the south; it is surrounded by beautiful plantations and pleasant grounds, and the walks about it, for several miles, are extremely picturesque, and the prospects on every side delightful.

SORBIE (or Sorby), is a parish and village—the latter 39 miles E. from Portpatrick, 30 S. E. from Stranraer, 13 S. from Newton-Stewart, and 6 S. from Wigtown; situated in a fine part of the county, and surrounded by land in a high state of cultivation The parish is of an irregular figure, extending along the shore about twelve miles, and varying in breadth from two to six miles inland. The chief bays in the parish, are Garlieston (above described) and Rigg, with the ports of Allan, Whaple and Innerwell; these bays and ports are very convenient for shipping, and well adapted for the prosecution of the fisheries. The headlands are Cruggleton and Eagerness: upon these are the remains of two strong castles, one of these called Cruggleton Castle, gives the name to the promontory; it is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1098, and shortly afterwards fell to the possession of the Kerlie's or M'Kerlie's, who retained possession until the reformation. Previously they owned Carolton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Cathcarts obtained in 1324. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated as one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot. It was taken by treachery, and Sir William went and retook it for his great friend William Kerlie, who was thereby restored to his patrimonial castle and territory. This is fully mentioned in Paterson's "Wallace and his Times." Eagerness was also built by the Danes, &c., but no particular account has been handed down About a mile to the east of the kirk are the gradually mouldering outlines of Sorbie tower, formerly belonging to the Hannay family. The places of worship are the parish church at Sorbie, and a Free church and an Independent chapel at Garlieston.

Sorbie belonged to a family called Sorby, now changed to Sorbie. The Hannays did not get it until a much later period.

GLENLUCE AND NEW LUCE.

GLENLUCE is a village in the parish of Old Luce, 19 miles E. by N. from Portpatrick, 18 W. from Wigton, 16 S. W. from Newton-Stewart, and 10 E. by S. from Stranraer; situated on the banks of the river Luce, and on the public road, at the head of Luce bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels, and affords employment for many fishermen. The country around is interesting and picturesque, and abounds with game of almost every kind. The church is a neat edifice, remarkable only for its simplicity; there is also a free church, and a chapel for a United Secession congregation. About a mile to the north of the church, farther up the vale (from which the village takes its name) are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190: when in its perfect state it must have been an extensive building. The vast mass of prostrate fragments at present cover about an acre and a half of ground, notwithstanding the quantities that have been carried away. The only part now remaining entire is a small apartment on the east side of the square; within which latter stood the cloisters; in the middle of this apartment stands a pillar, about fourteen feet high, from which eight arches spring, and have their terminations in the surrounding walls. Tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory, to have been at one time abbot of this establishment and adds that his magical library still exists under a particular part of the ruins; to ascertain which, a person excavated a part of the ground and found many curiosities, together with several skeletons in an upright position; the explorer however having been seized with insanity, farther search by him was interrupted, and the superstitions of the people here prevented others from pursuing the examination. The Dumfries and Portpatrick Railway, branch of the Caledonian line, goes through this town. The principal hotel here is the King's Arms. There is a monthly fair or market held here (for cattle) from the first Friday in the month of April to the first Friday in December.

The village of NEW LUCE is five miles north from Glenluce, situated on the Luce, where the Cross water falls into that river. This district, which, until the year 1646 formed part of the parish of Old Luce, extends about ten miles in length by from five to six in breath. It consists of high and low ground; of the former, the greater proportion is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. The parish church—a plain building, and an United Presbyterian chapel, are the places of worship.

KIRKMAIDEN, DRUMORE, STONEYKIRK,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of KIRKMAIDEN occupies nearly the whole of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtonshire—projecting into the mouth of the Solway Frith, and tapering to a point that inclines to the east. This parish which comprehends the most southerly district of all Scotland, is about ten miles in length and from two to four and a half in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and feeds numbers of black cattle. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves scooped out by the endless operations of the sea and particularly by its furious lashings against the opposing barrier in stormy weather; on both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. As PORTNISSOCK is a harbour, constructed at the expense of the late Andrew M'Douall, Esq., then proprietor, who used every exertion in his power to improve this locality. There is also a tolerable harbour at DRUMORE; here the coast-guard have a station, under the command of a lieutenant of the royal navy. The church, a plain edifice, is situate near the centre of the parish, not far from Drumore bay, at the distance of six miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 from Wigtown, 36 from Newton-Stewart, 20 from Stranraer, and 16 from Portpatrick. On the estate of Colonel M'Douall, of Logan, is a fish pond well worthy the inspection of visitors; it is hewn out of the solid rock, and has communication with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron grating; some of the fish in this artificial reservoir have been rendered so tame that they will feed out of the hand.

The parish of STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, six miles from Stranraer and about the like distance from Portpatrick; on the east and south east is the bay of Glenluce. The parish, which extends seven miles in length by from three to five in breadth, comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clachshant and Toskerton. The surface is generally hilly, moorish, and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. On the estate of John Maitland, Esq. in this district is an artificial mount, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in the time of war; there is likewise another, of a similar kind, on the estate of Sir John M'Taggart, of Ardwell House.

KIRKOWEN,

OR KIRKCOWAN, is a parish and village—the latter 10 miles from Glenluce, 8 from Wigtown and 6 from Newton-Stuart; situated on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Bladenoch. There are two woollen manufactories adjoining the village, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. The Portpatrick railway passes within a quarter of a mile of the village. The principal hotel here is the 'Commercial.' The church, which is a very neat edifice, was erected in 1838; its site, as well as the ground occupied by the church-yard, was munificently given by Captain W. C. Hamilton, of Craighlaw. There is a chapel for the United Presbyterians. The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland interspersed with pieces of arable land. It extends from north to south fifteen miles, by a general breadth of about five; and it is well watered by the Turf and Bladenoch streams.

CARRIERS

To NEWTON-STEWART, Mary and Margaret Nicholson, Monday & Friday

NEWTON-STEWART,

AND THE PARISHES OF PENNINGHAM, MINNIGAFF AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWTON-STEWART is a thriving town and burgh of barony, 121 miles S. W. from Edinburgh, 82 S. from Glasgow, 52 W. from Dumfries, 26 W. from Stranraer, and 8 N. from Wigtown; situated on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick on the right bank of the river Cree, in the parish of PENNINGHAM, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff. The line of railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick passes near the town. The town owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts. Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which hegave the name of Newton-Stewart. About the year 1778 the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas, Esquire, of Colinwark who founded the town of Castle-Douglas, when it was created a burgh of barony, under the title of Newton-Douglas, but it subsequently resumed its original name. About eighty years ago the houses consisted but of one storey, and were covered with thatch, but the greater portion are now two storeys in height, and are slated. The town is principally composed of one long street, in the centre of which is the town-house. The Cree is crossed by a very handsome bridge of five arches, connecting the larger division of the town with the lesser part on the other side of the river. The government of the town is vested in the hands of the justices of the peace and nine commissioners elected by the ratepayers. The cotton manufacture was formerly carried on here and in the neighbourhood to a considerable extent, but now it is completely extinct. The staple at present is wool, furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly purchased for the Lancashire markets. There is a large tannery in the town, a woollen mill and two breweries. The places of worship are the Established church, which is considered to be the most elegant modern ecclesiastical structure in the south of Scotland. The Free church, the United Presbyterian church and the Reformed Presbyterian. There is also a Roman Catholic chapel. There is no town in the kingdom better supplied with educational establishments, some of which are well and richly endowed viz. the 'Douglas academy' founded by Samuel Douglas, Esq., of the island of Jamaica. The 'Ewart Institute' founded by James and John Ewart, merchants, belonging to the district, and the Parochial schools; there are also Industrial and Infant schools which are supported entirely at the expence of the Right Hon. the Earl and Countess of Galloway, and a noble institution called the 'Industrial Home' has lately been founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about forty destitute and orphan girls. There are also several adventure schools. There is a mechanics' institute in the town, in a very flourishing condition; it is liberally supported by the gentry of the neighbourhood; the news room is supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals. It is open to the public gratuitously every evening: the library contains about one thousand volumes. The British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale and the City of Clasgow Banking Company have each established a branch in this thriving town. There are three excellent hotels viz., the Grapes, the Crown and the Galloway Arms. Agricultural improvement has been carried on to a great and beneficial extent in this district. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Minnigaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to Claverhouse, and superior of this district, used immediately before the revolution to administer justice. About three miles to the north of the town are the remains of Castle-Stewart, formerly belonging (as before stated) to a branch of the Galloway family, but now in possession of Colonel Stopford Blair, of Penninghame. The weekly market is held on Friday. Cattle markets, which are well attended, are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual fairs on the last Fridays of March, July and October, and on the first Friday after the 15th of June (old style.)

The parish of PENNINGHAM, or Penninghame, extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about fifteen miles, by a breadth of from three to five; bounded by Wigton on the south and Kirkowen on the west. The greater part of the district is moorish and uncultivated, chiefly adapted to pasture.

MINNIGAFF is a large parish in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, bounded on the west by the Cree, over which is a bridge (before noticed), forming the communication with the parish of Penninghame and the town of Newton-Stewart. The parish is 17 miles in length and 11 in breadth. In the lower parts the land is a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which stream, being navigable for several miles up, has been of much benefit in an agricultural point of view. This river likewise produces excellent fish of different kinds, but the best and most abundant is the salmon. By far the greater portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage. It is covered by large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. There are two places of worship—one each of the Established and the Free churches. Within a mile of Newton-Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is 'Heron-Kirouchtree,' beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by tasteful serpentine walks. A grotto in the grounds is of exceeding romantic appearance; it is curiously formed out of an old stone quarry, and is well worth inspection.

PORT WILLIAM AND MOCHRUM.

PORT WILLIAM is a prosperous village in the parish of MOCHRUM, 24 miles S.E. from Stranraer, 15 S.S.E. from Glenluce, and 9 W. from Whithorn, situated on the bay of Glenluce. The harbour here, though small, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported for Liverpool and Lancaster. In the vicinity is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of Sir William Maxwell, Bart., proprietor of the place and its founder. The mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the bay of Glenluce, the shores of Galloway, the Isle of Man, and the coast of Cumberland: near it is an old castle, surrounded by lofty trees; and contiguous are the remains of the old Parish church, now occupied as a place of sepulture by a family named Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate, and which was wrested from them when power was law. The houses in general are very well built, afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists visiting this place during the bathing season. The principal hotel is the Monreith Arms. The places of worship are a chapel each for the Free and United Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics.

The parish of MOCHRUM is about ten miles in length, and extends inland between four and five miles. The Castle, or 'Old Place' of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient picturesque building, in an inland part of the parish; it was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, Knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquess of Bute. The village of Mochrum, which is about a mile and a half from Port William, contains nothing worthy of mention, except the Parish church and school.

PORTPATRICK

IS a parish and sea-port town—the latter 133 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 89 s.s.w. from Glasgow, between 34 and 35 miles west from Wigtown, the same distance w. by s. from Newton-Stewart, and rather more than 8. s. by w. from Stranraer: it is distant from Dublin 117 miles; from Belfast 36, and from Donaghadee 21 (19 nautical miles). It is situated on the coast of the North Channel, and has long been the great thoroughfare from the north of Ireland, being the nearest point of Great Britain to that country, and the best place of crossing from one kingdom to the other. The town is small, but its position delightful—having a fine southern exposure, and surrounded on the other side by a ridge of small hills. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of Lord Montgomery, whose residence was the old castle of Dunskey, which stands in the neighbourhood, on the brink of a tremendous precipice overhanging the sea, and was once a building of considerable strength, as appears from its interesting remains; the late Sir James Hunter Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and it is to the exertions of that gentleman that the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements. There is now one of the finest quays in Britain, and a reflecting light-house; in the construction of the quay the diving bell was most successfully employed. Several years ago, extensive and important improvements were carried on at the harbour, under the auspices of government and direction of Sir John Rennie, for the accommodation of her Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square, which is connected with the harbour, by means of a channel, containing ten feet of water at low tides, has recently been completed. The mail communication between this place and Ireland however, ceased in the year 1849, and since that date the business of this locality has been diminished to a great extent; but the communication will, it is expected, shortly be renewed; by this short sea route, it is only 19 miles to Donaghadee. This place has now railway communication with all parts of Great Britain.

The places of worship are the Parish church, and one for the Free Communion of Scotland; and the schools are one connected with each. The Parish church is a remarkably neat edifice, with an embattled tower, and from its advantageous site is a conspicuous, as well as an ornamental object.

STRANRAER,

AND THE PARISHES OF INCH, KIRKCOLM, LESWALT, CAIRNRYAN & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STRANRAER (or Stranrawer) is a thriving, respectable and ancient town, a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery, as well as a parish within its bounds; nearly 10 miles N. from Glenluce, and rather more than 8 (by the toll road) from Portpatrick, eligibly situated at the inner extremity of Loch Ryan. The principal street is of great length, but the houses have not been erected on the most regular plan. Many new buildings have lately been erected, which are of a very handsome and substantial character, the principal of which is the office of the Clydesdale Banking Company, built of granite, dwelling houses in Hanover-street, London road, Agnew crescent, &c. In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, but now used as the police office, an edifice of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained. It is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI., and is called 'the tower fortalice, and manor place of Chappell,' and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan. In the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth his wife, then Lady Auchtriloor. The lands of Auchtriloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair. The town hall in High-street is a neat structure; in it a justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, also a burgh court, occasionally, on Saturday, and the sheriff of the county frequently holds criminal courts with a jury, and also courts for the recovery of small debts. The prison is a handsome and substantial erection, possessing the requisite adaptation both for confinement and discipline. The academy is a large and commodious building. As a royal burgh, the town is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and fourteen councillors; and it joins with Whithorn, Wigtown, and New Galloway in parliamentary representation.

The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, and the harbour is now large and commodious, consisting of west pier, east pier, and breastwork, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels. The east pier is connected to the railway by a harbour branch, by which cattle, goods and passengers are conveyed direct from the steamers. There is 18 feet water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1100 tons burden can discharge there. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow a fleet of men of war to ride at anchor here with perfect safety, and it was here, at CAIRNRYAN, where the Prince of Wales first landed and trod Scottish soil. The bay affords a plentiful supply of fine oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to Sir William Wallace, of Loch Ryan, who annually lets it. This fishing employs upwards of 100 fishermen for eight months in the year, and the quality of the oysters are so fine that the men can earn good wages, and pay for the privilege of fishing about £800 a year. There are likewise several kinds of white fish caught abundantly, and occasionally some herrings are got equal in quality to the finest obtained on any other part of the Scotch coast. There are two coast-guard establishments here, and a custom-house, the jurisdictional duties of which includes all the creeks within 'Rhinns' as members.

The manufactures are very limited, the town depending principally upon the fine agricultural district surrounding it, grain, cheese, and all kinds of farm produce, and cattle are conveyed to Glasgow regularly twice every week by steam vessels to Belfast once a week, and to Liverpool occasionally. The Portpatrick railway passes through the town. Among other branches usually found in a flourishing town, there are in Stranraer an extensive brewery, tanyards, extensive nurseries in the neighbourhood, some nail manufactories, and five banking companies—branches of the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Banking Company, City of Glasgow Bank, and the National Bank of Scotland. The principal inns are the 'King's Arms,' the 'Commercial Hotel,' and the 'George.' News rooms, subscription libraries, and various societies—literary, benevolent and religious, are among the institutions maintained by the denizens of Stranraer.

The new church, in Church-street, is a very handsome structure in the pointed style of architecture, the front lofty, and surmounted with pinnacles. The interior is capacious, with galleries and a commanding pulpit, and the whole has an aspect of chaste neatness. The second church connected with the Establishment is situated at the western extremity of the town, on a lofty eminence, and, with its tower, is a conspicuous landmark from the loch. There are other places of worship for various denominations, inclusive of two Free churches—a list of all these is given in the Directory, with their localities and ministers. The cemetery, beautifully situated above the town, commands a fine view of the loch: it is very tastefully laid out, and contains many handsome monuments.

Numerous seats, adorned with all the charms of nature and art, ornament the neighbourhood of Stranraer. Culhorn, the residence of the Earl of Stair, is one mile distant, and Castle Kennedy, four miles off, the property of the same nobleman, is surrounded by delightfully picturesque scenery. At Castle Kennedy there is in process of building a fine castle for the Earl of Stair. The following, situate in the vicinity of the burgh, are also worthy of notice:—Lochnaw Castle, the residence of Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart; Corsewell House, J. Carrick Moore, Esq.; Loch Ryan House, Sir William T. F. Wallace; Dunskey, Andrew Wauchope, Esq.; Balgreggan, John Maitland, Esq.: Logan, Colonel M'Dowal; Genoch, Alex. M'Neel Caird, Esq.; Rephad, George Guthrie, Esq.; Laurel Bank, John Adair, Esq.; Belmont, Nathan Taylor, Esq., &c.

The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs:—For horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June, and the Monday before the second Thursday in October. For cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing from April and ending in November. Other fairs for general business are also held in May and August.

The parish of INCH lies on the shore of Loch Ryan, extending nine miles in length by a breadth nearly as great. The parish church stands on the margin of a lake, in which there is a small beautifully wooded island. The lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which stands the ruins of a castle, formerly a seat of the Earls of Stair.

KIRKCOLM parish is bounded by Loch Ryan on the east, measuring a square of about five miles. The church is pleasantly situate near the shore of the lake, north of the bay called the Wig.

The parish of LESWALT lies betwixt the Irish channel on the west and Loch Ryan on the east. It is about the same size and of much the same form as Kirkcolm. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale; while, from the sea, the coast presents bold and rocky features.

CAIRN RYAN is a small group of houses, on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan, six miles from STANRAER. The harbour affords safe anchorage for vessels, which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lofty lighthouse for their guidance. Sir William T. F. Wallace has a residence here.

WHITHORN,

WITH THE ISLE OF WHITHORN AND PARISH OF GLASSERTON,

WHITHORN (or Whithern) is a town of considerable antiquity and a royal burgh, in the parish of Whithorn, 10 miles E. by S. from Portpatrick, 32 S. E. from Stranraer, 21 S. from Newton-Stewart, and nearly 13 S. from Wigtown, situated not far distant from Wigtown bay. It was originally inhabited by a tribe of Britons called the Novantes, and was then a town of some consequence; it is mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia; the Saxons call it Hwitern, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in the fourth century, which Bede mentions as the first that was erected of stone. During the eighth century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the Episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the twelfth century. After the period of the reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The town consists chiefly of one street, running from north to south, with diverging alleys. From successive kings, Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, and nine councillors; and joins with Stranraer, and other burghs herein before mentioned, in returning one member to parliament. The trade of Whithorn is very inconsiderable, and that which it does enjoy is merely of a retail and domestic character; independent of this, however, there are two banking establishments, and several insurance agencies. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, and one each for United and Reformed Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. The parish church is remarkably neat as well as spacious, and much superior to most of the parish kirks in this county; it is erected partly on the venerable ruins of the priory, founded by St. Ninian before mentioned, and who is said to have been the first who converted the Picts to the Christian faith. These ruins are remarkably grand and imposing; the contain several large vaults, a beautiful Saxon, and some Gothic arches also sculptured royal armorial bearings of Scotland, and the dilapidated arms of the bishops of Galloway. The inhabitants support a subscription library, and a Bible society, and Parochial and Infants' schools are the other institutitions of the town. A cattle market is held on the second Thursday in each month from April to December, and an annual fair in July.

The ISLE OF WHITHORN is a pleasant village, about three miles from Whithorn, of which it is the port. Near the village stand the remains of an old church, said to be the first built in this part of the kingdom, or as some affirm, the first founded in Scotland, and its preservation is desirable from its venerable age and interesting origin.

The parish of GLASSERTON lies on the east coast of Luce bay, bounded by Whithorn on the east, Mochrum on the west, and Kirkinner on the north; it extends seven miles and a half in length by a general breadth of two and a half, except in its northern part, where it is nearly double that space. On the coast near its north western confines is Lag Point, with a small haven on the north, called Monreith Bay; a village at its head is termed the Milltown of Monreith. The church stands in the southern quarter of the parish.

POST OFFICE, WHITHORN, Alexander Gordon, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (per mail cart), from Newton-Stewart at half-past three afternoon, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past six morning.

WIGTOWN,

AND THE PARISH OF KIRKINNER AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIGTOWN, or WIGTON—(the former mode of spelling is, however, now generally adopted, to distinguish this town from that of Wigton, in the county of Cumberland), is a royal and parliamentary burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish; 105 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 58 S.W. from Dumfries, 28 E. by S. from Stranraer, and 8 S. from Newton-Stewart, pleasantly situated on an eminence near the north side of the Bladenoch water, two miles from its junction with the Cree, or bay of Wigtown. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence, during the middle ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of successful Saxon invaders, who conferred on it the name of Wig, from the place having been contested in a battle; the adjunct ton, or 'town,' was afterwards given when the town arose. The castle of Wigtown, subsequently became a royal residence; but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous until the reign of David II. when it gave the title of Earl to the family of Fleming. The principal street of the present town is a parallelogram, of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron pailings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants. At the end is a very handsome modorn cross, of granite, sculptured in an elegant and tasteful manner, and inclosed with an iron railing. At the other extremity is the county buildings having a tower of considerable height, which imparts a degree of dignity to the town. The building contains the court-room, the sheriff's small debt court, and the ordinary courts—which latter are held every Tuesday in time of session. A mechanics' institution is liberally supported by the gentry of the town, the news room is supplied with the leading newspapers, &c. of the day, it also contains an excellent library, with upwards of 1,000 volumes. A monument has been erected here in memory of Margaret Wilson and Margaret M'Lachlan, the martyrs, who perished in the Bladnoch water, in the year 1685, it is situated on the top of Windyhill, from which there is a magnificent view of the town and the surrounding country. The monument was erected by public subscription at a cost of £200. Many new buildings have been erected, some of them of a very tasteful and costly description; such as the new county buildings, the parochial, burgh, and grammar school, the county jail, and the banks—the latter, branches from the respectable establishments of the 'British Linen Company,' the 'City of Glasgow,' and the 'Clydesdale Banking Company.' The principal inn is the 'Queen's Arms,' of which P. B. Kevan is the proprietor; the burgh altogether may be considered in an improving condition. The harbour of Wigtown is safe, and has depth of water for vessels of three hundred tons burthen to approach the town. The principal exports are corn and cattle; and there is a regular communication with Liverpool by steam packets. Wigtown is the seat of a custom house, the members of which comprehend the creeks of Wigtonshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. In the year 1581 Wigtown was specified as one of the 'King's Free Burghs,' it is, as a royal burgh, governed by a provost, two bailies, and fifteen councillors, and is associated with Stranraer, Whithorn, and New Galloway, in returning one member to the legislature.

The places of worship are a church of the establishment, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. A friendly society, established in 1795, is in the town. The parish of Wigtown extends five miles in length by four in breadth; it has several eminences throughout, but it is in general flat and fertile. At the western extremity of the parish are nineteen large granite stones, placed in a circular form: they are supposed to have belonged to a druid place of worship or sacrifice, while tradition points to the spot as the tomb of King Galdus. The market, entitled by charter, to be holden on Saturday, is now discontinued. Fairs are also chartered to be held at Candlemas, on the first Monday in April, and the first Fridays in July and August, all old style—they are discontinued. A monthly cattle market on the fourth Friday of each month has been established, and there is an annual cattle show in July, which is numerously attended.

The kirk town of KIRKINNER is about three miles from Wigtown, on the road to Garliestown, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery. The principal ornament in this neighbourhood is the stately mansion of R. Vans Agnew, Esq. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served as the foundation of the 'Bride of Lammermuir,' by the late Sir W. Scott. The parish extends three miles along Wigtown bay, the Bladnoch water dividing it on the north from Wigtown. The ruins of Longcastle church (the parish now incorporated with Kirkinner) stand at the southern extremity of the parish.

THE WATER TURBINE.

At Scout Mills, Mossley, the property of Mr. John Heywood Seville, situated on the banks of the river Tame, the river which winds and winds and ripples along the ragged and beautiful valley of Mossley, has been erected one of Messrs. Schiele & Co.'s large turbines. Until recently, in a vault at one end of the mill, there rolled slowly along a huge water wheel, 18 feet in diameter, with buckets 15 feet in length—on a fall of water of about 13 feet, but it being impossible to adapt the wheel to the varying supplies of water, for in a dry season it could not do much for want of water, and in a wet one it almost did less, because there was too much. This wheel has been lately taken out, and in its place has been erected, by Messrs. C. Schiele & Co., of this city, one of their self-adjusting turbines, with patent governor attached, of their new patent, dated 7th July, 1863, sealed by order of the Lord Chancellor, 26th January, 1864. On entering the wheelhouse, now cleared of its former monster occupant, you see, or think you see, something moving in the water, for the turbine is immersed in water, from which rises an upright shaft, some seven inches in diameter, revolving round noiselessly and regularly at some forty to fifty revolutions per minute. Connected with the shaft, a little to the right, you see a pair of governor balls, as also a small pipe, not more than some two to three inches in diameter, conveying water to the turbine, which, we confess, to the ordinary observer conveys the idea that that is the only supply of water the turbine receives.

Upon inquiry we were told that although the pipe in question does not feed the turbine proper, it supplies the motive power to the most important improvement in the turbine, viz., its self-adjusting & self-governing power, or, in other words, the power to adapt itself to the most varying supply of water or the most varying load: a power not possessed by any other water wheel, engine, or turbine made; in fact, by engineers themselves it has been deemed almost an absolute impossibility, but that the difficulty has been overcome by the Messrs. C. Schiele & Co., in their latest patent, there cannot be the slightest doubt, a fact that any observer, even the most sceptical, by a visit to Mossley, may see demonstrated before his eyes.

The same turbine will work at the same speed, and with the same economy of water, at 5-horse power that it will at 100. While all other turbines are liable to choke and get fast, these are so constructed, and the water ways are so large, that sticks and other floating debris that would not pass an ordinary water wheel will pass freely through them. The water enters the turbine at the bottom, and flows easily out all round when it has done its work, by which arrangement they work with little or no friction. They are not influenced by what is commonly called back-water, they will work as well in a flood as at any other time. There is connected with them a highest water level regulator, an application of great value in economising water or in working in connection with steam. There is also a flush gate arrangement, enabling you at any time to clear out your lodge or reservoir without its passing through the turbine.

In short, in our judgment, they are as complete a motive power for water as the world has ever yet seen for steam. What Watt has accomplished with the stationary engine, and Stephenson with the locomotive, we have no hesitation in saying the Messrs. C. Schiele & Co. have accomplished with their latest turbine. The diameter of the turbine referred to is 8 feet by 13 inches deep.

From the "Manchester Examiner and Times," April 30th 1864.

THE WATER MOTOR POWER.

On a previous occasion attention has been called to the value of Mr. SCHIELE's adaptation of the old Turbine principle to his new patent, by means of which every sort of mechanical operation may be carried on, and thus supersede the stationary engine, with its expensive consumption of coal. Of course the Turbine cannot be applied except where a proper supply of water can be obtained; and the quantity must in each case regulate the work accomplished. Thus, for instance, a large mill, containing several thousand spindles, must have a reliable source of water on which to depend.

In the valleys around Manchester it is no uncommon thing to find a huge, old-fashioned water-wheel in a vault at the base of the building, working in conjunction with a small engine; the latter being regulated by the work done by the former. Several of these water-wheels will be found in the various mills in the pretty Mossley Valley, drawing their motive power from the supply in the river Tame.

One of these wheels has just been supplanted by the largest Turbine that the Messrs. SCHIELE have yet constructed under their new patent of 7th July, 1863, sealed by the Lord Chancellor, 26th January, 1864.

In the basement of the Scout Mills, at Mossley, belonging to Mr. J. H. Seville, for several years an iron breast water wheel, 18ft. diameter, with buckets 15ft. in length, on a fall of water from 13ft. to 14ft., has been fixed and working. The motion of such a wheel is irregular and unreliable. This one never worked at more than half its power; and when a fresh came in the river, the back-water was so great as very much to impede instead of increasing its power.

We expected to find a gigantic massive drum, moving majestically slow, driving the shaft that ran through the mill; but were astonished to see an instrument only 8ft. in diameter, and when fully open, one foot one inch deep, spinning round at a considerable but perfectly regular pace, and without any noise. The stream of water was low, and this afforded an opportunity of appreciating the most interesting point in the construction of the Turbine. The inlet of the Turbine is entirely regulated by the supply of water; if the flow is equal to a thickness of two inches, the Turbine will open that much; if there is a greater supply, it will open the Turbine to a corresponding height, until its greatest height, namely—13 inches, is reached. The Turbine is estimated to be of from 80-horse to 100-horse power. The water ways are large, so that sticks and leaves of considerable size pass through harmlessly. With a very short supply of water, this Turbine is already doing more work than was ever accomplished by the wheel which it has displaced.

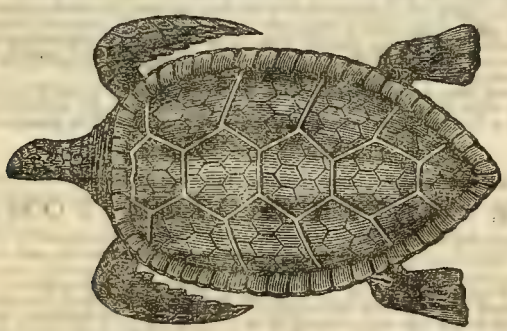
Our EXCELSIOR FANS "PATENT of 1863," for Fires and Cupolas, are unequalled; also for the Ventilation of Cotton, Woollen, Flax, and Silk Mills, Weaving Sheds, Dye Houses, Breweries, Steam Boats, Mines, Collieries, Public Buildings, &c., whilst in working they are perfectly noiseless, "the only Fans made that are so," and take little more than half the power to drive them that other Fans do.

These Fans have earned for themselves a world-wide reputation, and are now pronounced to be, in every respect, the best Fans made.

If necessary, we could refer you to hundreds of firms who have them in use.

To prevent our friends being misled, we beg to say that our Machines are not supplied by any other firm or company.



The Machinery supplied by the North Moor Foundry Company, Oldham, bearing Mr. Schiele's name, is made under Old Patents, taken out prior to 1860, and does not bear the slightest resemblance either in principle or mode of construction to ours.

In answer to repeated inquiries, and, at the same time, in justice to ourselves, our friends, and the public, we beg to say that the Fan, the breaking of which occasioned the late lamentable and fatal accident at the works of Messrs. Davy Brothers, Blast Lane, Sheffield, and referred to in the columns of "The Times," of the 16th Instant, the "Sheffield & Rotherham Independent," the "Sheffield Daily Telegraph," the "Manchester Examiner & Times," and the "Manchester Guardian," and other papers, was not supplied by us, nor was it made under any of our patents, but was supplied by the North Moor Foundry Company.

MILLER & RICHARD

Letter Founders to Her Majesty,

Beg leave to inform the Trade that they have always ready for immediate delivery, both in Edinburgh and London, Founts in several uniform series, adapted for Newspapers, Book-work, or Jobbing, cast of their EXTRA-HARD METAL, which secures the combined advantages of higher finish, increased tenacity, and diminished weight. This metal, after some years' wear under the HOE and other Machines, has been pronounced to be at least twice as durable as the ordinary metal. The great improvements they have introduced in their manufacture, enable them to supply Founts of this superior metal at a very important reduction of price.

They purchased the Goodwill of the Business of the late Messrs. S. & T. SHARWOOD of the AUSTIN LETTER FOUNDRY, LONDON, and also the Matrices of their principal useful and modern and having added largely to them from the newest styles of Ornamental Letter, they can now promptly furnish a COMPLETE PRINTING OFFICE on any scale, with the most modern and most durable Founts that can be produced. They have pleasure in announcing that they have made arrangements by which they can supply Founts from the whole of the Matrices and Moulds of the

MUSIC TYPE

of the late Messrs. Duncan Sinclair & Sons of Edinburgh;

and that they have obtained likewise all the LONG PRIMER Punches, Matrices, and Moulds of the late Foundry of Messrs. FERGUSON BROTHERS; also the greater number of the Punches, Matrices, and Moulds of the late Foundry of Messrs. JOHN MILNE & Co. of EDINBURGH; and will be happy to supply Founts or Sorts to any extent.

WOOD LETTER.

They have now a large stock of Wood Letter, all of which is cut on their own Premises and under their own inspection, and contains every style and variety; great attention is paid to the seasoning of the wood, and to the shape, size, and accuracy in the height against paper.

MECHANICAL QUOINS.

They supply the new Patent "Mechanical Quoins" for locking up formes, which dispense with wooden side and foot sticks, mallet, and shooter, and wooden quoins. This new means of locking up is so powerful, that it is accomplished without any greater effort than is required for opening or shutting a good lock; and it acts with perfect regularity. The invention consists of a Quoin in tempered metal which is provided with teeth, and the little apparatus is completed by a cog with corresponding teeth, which is turned by a key. This locking up apparatus is manufactured with tempered metal, and no article in the Printing Office will outlast it. It is now very generally used for every class of work, and is a great desideratum from its economy, security, and durability.

BRASS RULE.

They also make Brass Rule of every description; CASES OF CUT AND STAMPED BRASS; MITRED PAGE RULES; STEREOTYPE BLOCKS; GALLEYS of all kinds; the improved pinned CASES; CHASES of cast and wrought iron; the new improved COMPOSING STICKS of iron, brass, and mahogany with brass slide; SHOOTING STICKS of boxwood, iron and brass tipped; Wood and French Metal FURNITURE; and every requisite for a Printing Office, all of the best quality and at reasonable prices.

Presses, Cylindrical Inking Tables, Cutting Machines, &c.

They keep stock of Presses, Cylindrical Inking Tables, Imposing Surfaces, Cutting Machines, &c.; also of Press and Machine Blankets of various thicknesses and widths, and Machine Tape of the best make, and at manufacturers' prices.

Fire and Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED IN 1836. INCORPORATED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

Subscribed Capital, £2,000,000. Accumulated Funds upwards of £800,000.

Head Offices:

ABERDEEN, 3 King St. | LONDON, 1 Moorgate St.

Branches:

EDINBURGH...20 St. Andrew Square...ROBERT CHRISTIE, Junr. Secretary
DUNDEE.....14 St. Andrew Place...T. W. THOMS, Secretary.
GLASGOW.....19 St. Vincent Place...G. C. SMITH, Secretary.

The Directors submit the claims of this Institution to the support of the public, on the strength of its large Subscribed Capital and Accumulated Funds, and the success which has hitherto attended its operations, both as regards the extent and the character of the business transacted.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Company grants Insurances against Fire, on nearly every description of property, in Great Britain, the Colonies, and most foreign countries, at the current rates of premium.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The Life business of the NORTHERN, which embraces every description of risk contingent upon the duration of human life, is divided into two distinct branches:—

1st.—THE NON-PARTICIPATING BRANCH,

The assured in which receive no additions to their policies; the premiums being calculated on the lowest scale consistent with safety: and in which the whole profits, less a fixed percentage of one-tenth of the premiums, for Management and Guarantee of the sums assured, belong to the Policy-holders; and, in reckoning these profits, the Company is, under its new Act of Parliament (1865), precluded from deducting anything beyond what is actually paid away as commission to agents. The necessity felt by all purely Mutual Societies of setting aside a portion of their profits to form a Guarantee Fund is in this way avoided, and at the same time that economy which is the boast of the Mutual System is ensured.

Detailed Prospectuses, Fire and Life Proposals, and every information may be obtained at the Offices or Agencies of the Company throughout the Kingdom.

(Inventors of the Far-famed Highland Cloak and Deer Stalking Knickerbockers—Garments unrivalled for comfort and convenience.)

Return their sincere thanks to the Nobility, Gentry, and Public generally, for the support and patronage accorded them for a period of twenty years, and beg to inform Sportsmen and Tourists visiting the Highlands, that they have in stock a First-class assortment of Scotch Tweeds, in all the varied shades suitable for Mountain, Moor, and River.

The leading Shooting Tweeds always in stock.

The only Highland Dresses & Highland Cloaks shown at the Exhibitions of 1851 & 1862, were made-up by A. M'B. & SONS, who would respectfully inform all patriotic Scotchmen at home and abroad, who desire to preserve intact the ancient garb of the Highlands of Scotland, "the Noblest Dress of all," that they have made it their life long study to excel in this particular department, and their Style of Dress being now almost universally worn for the Ball Room and the Hill, is sufficient acknowledgment of its great pre-eminence to commend it to their best attention.

Highland Dresses for Boys, as made-up for the Royal Family of Great Britain, & the Prince Imperial of France.

Clan Tartans, Bordered Kilting Tweeds, Hose, Sporrans, Ornaments.

Boys' Knickerbocker Suits, declared by the "Cornhill Magazine" to be "the best dress for Boys ever invented," which A. M'B. & SONS were the first to introduce to Public notice, and which they continue to supply at moderate prices, with all the latest improvements.

AN INFALLIBLE CURE

FOR

DISTEMPER IN DOGS

In deference to the solicitations of many Sportsmen & Owners of Dogs, who have tested the efficacy of this valuable remedy, and who pronounce it to be a sure specific, the discoverer has resolved to give the public an opportunity of obtaining the medicine. He has for many years watched its astonishing effects in hundreds of cases, and he now places it before the world, confident that a single trial will establish its character as an infallible remedy even when other famed medicines have proved unavailing. The proprietor holds in his possession numerous testimonials (which are daily accumulating), testifying to the never failing efficacy of the medicine, but instead of vaunting its properties by submitting these testimonials to the public, he prefers to let the value of his discovery rest on its own merits

This sovereign remedy effects a complete cure, entirely eradicating the disease in a very short time. It is prepared under the immediate superintendence of the discoverer,

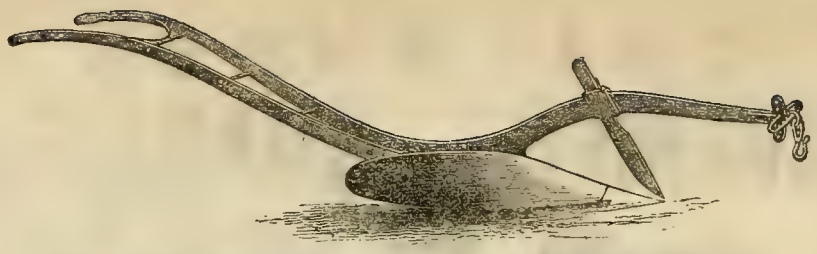
PUBLIC NOTICE.—Several makers of Cheap Baking Powders (supplied to Retailers Cheap because adulterated), having imitated BORWICK'S ORIGINAL BAKING POWDERS so closely that Consumers have been deceived to the injury of their own health, and to the reputation of Borwick's Baking Powder, THIS IS TO GIVE NOTICE, that for the better protection of the Public, the Proprietor has adopted an entirely New Trade Label, as under (duly Registered),

And to Imitate which is Felony.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER

Was pronounced Pure and Perfectly Wholesome, by the late SIR W. BURNETT, Director-General of the Medical Department, on its introduction to the Navy. Dr. HASSALL, Author of "Adulterations detected," pronounced it "Pure and Good," as also Dr. HAMILTON, Dr. ELLIOTT, and other eminent Medical Men. It has likewise been approved of by the Queen's Private Baker, &c.

Extract from Lancet, June 10th, 1865.—"We were surprised to find that some Baking Powders were adulterated with Alum to the extent of 20 per cent. The use of Alum is universally condemned."



Lancet, July 22nd, 1865.—"Mr. Borwick's Baking Powder was analysed amongst others, and found to be PERFECTLY FREE from Alum." To be had of all respectable Dealers, and at the Factory, 24 Chiswell Street, LONDON.

1st.—It is light and portable, the seed box, 20 feet in length, being made to turn on a piviot alongside the horse, and can pass through a gate of six feet ten inches.

2nd.—The slides, or regulating plates, work on the principle of parallel rulers, the seed having but one plate to come through, whereas (in every other machine hitherto known) there are two plates. Its propelling motion is simple, and consequently not liable to get out of order.

3rd.—It is fitted with an index for regulating quantity, and can be set to sow from half-a-bushel to seven bushels per acre, and can shut or open one or both slides thirty times in one minute. It has gained a number of Prizes at the Highland and the Royal Northern Societies' Shows.

Quarries: BARNACLAVAN and YOKULL.

These Quarries are celebrated for producing Flagging of great strength, durability, and levelness of surface. They are extensively demanded by Civil Engineers, Architects and Surveyors, and Corporations and Local Boards for the following purposes: Foot Pathing, Manufactories, Warehouses, Railway Stations, and Buildings of Public Character. By repeated experiments it is shewn that the Caithness Flagging resists almost double the pressure of any other paving stones used, besides possessing a beautiful blueish colour. This Pavement can be supplied from 1 to 5 inches thick, with Joints Squared, Hammered, or Sawn Edges, and with Natural or Rubbed Surfaces. Orders to any extent will receive immediate attention. The Original
CAITHNESS
FLAGSTONE QUARRIES,
CASTLEHILL, THURSO,

Belonging to George Traill, Esq. of Ratter, M.P.

AND WROUGHT UPWARDS OF 40 YEARS.

The CASTLEHILL FLAGSTONE combines in a remarkable degree the following important qualities. It possesses great strength and durability, and is not liable to scale or flake. The mineral properties being equal throughout, thereby insuring a smooth and even wear. It resists the action of the severest frosts, and from not being porous, dries rapidly after rain. It neither retains damp nor becomes slippery, and is easily cleared of mud. It is squared with sawn joints, so as to secure perfect closeness and solidity. It thus unites the greatest substantiality, ornament, and economy, as well from the quality of the Stone itself (compared with any other flagging), as from the remarkably low price at which the Proprietor is enabled to offer it, in consequence of the immense extent of the works, and the great facility of shipment at his own harbour in the immediate vicinity of the Quarries.

Specimens may be seen in several of the principal Lobbies and Corridors of the NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, where it has been under the direction of Sir Charles Barry; it may be seen also at the ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON, where it has been under the direction of Mr. Tite; and on the east side of VAUXHALL BRIDGE, by Messrs. Walker, Burgess & Cooper; in Lime Street, LIVERPOOL; Hamilton Square, BIRKENHEAD, where it has been laid about 40 years in front of the house of Mr. Laird, M.P., and the two adjoining houses; Central Station, NEWCASTLE; in front of the REGISTER OFFICE, the NEW POST OFFICE, of the BRITISH LINEN COMPANY'S and WESTERN BANK'S OFFICES, St. Andrew's Square, EDINBURGH; the ABERDEEN MARKETS; and at various places in BRIGHTON, SALISBURY, LYNN, GLASGOW, &c., &c.

The CASTLEHILL CAITHNESS QUARRIES produce Flags from 1 inch to 6½ inches thick, and in slabs of any superficial contents, and orders to any extent may be executed on short notice of Natural, Half-Rubbed, and Rubbed Faces, Sawn edges.

Relative Transverse Strength of Hailes, Craigleith, Arbroath, and Castlehill Caithness Flagging, from an experiment by GEORGE BUCHANAN, ESQ., F.R.S.E., formerly President R.S.S.A.

THE Advantage of the Asphalte Floor in Barns, Byres, Stables, &c., cannot be over-estimated on account of its Disinfecting qualities. Mr. JAMES ORR, 14 ROYAL EXCHANGE, EDINBURGH.

Dundee and the North of Scotland.

FROM the great prosperity of the Linen and Jute Trades of late years, Dundee has become a place of great wealth and importance, and the centre of a large and populous district.

THE DUNDEE ADVERTISER,

A COUNTY PAPER, ESTABLISHED IN 1801,

And conducted for about twenty years by Mr. RINTOUL, afterwards of the Spectator, has long been the leading Journal of the town and district. As a Daily Paper, it now circulates over the whole North of Scotland, anticipating the Edinburgh & Glasgow papers by several hours.

By its powerful writing, its great attention to Commercial and Shipping affairs, its admirable digest of each day's intelligence, and the spirited enterprise of its managers in sparing no expense to obtain the earliest and fullest news, the Dundee Advertiser has become a splendid Advertising medium, and is now invariably selected for all important announcements intended to be brought under the notice of the Mercantile, Manufacturing, Shipping, Agricultural, and Professional interests in the North-east of Scotland.

The Parliamentary Return last published of the number of stamps issued gives the following figures for the Dundee newspapers :—

NEWSPAPERS.	1863.		1864.
	Quarter to 30th September	Quarter to 31st December.	Quarter to 31st March.	Quarter to 30th June.
Dundee Advertiser	19,500	15,000	23,000	20,000
Dundee Courier and Argus.....	2,000	2,000	2,000	3,000
Northern Warder.....	1,500	2,000	1,000	1,500

The above return gives some idea of the relative number of copies sent by post, but the great bulk of the copies of the Advertiser are now delivered by railway.

Managers of Public Companies, Publishers, and Advertisers generally will only consult their own interests by forwarding their advertisements to

JOHN LENG, Publisher, Dundee Advertiser, DUNDEE, N.B.

LADY LANE WORKS,

PAISLEY,

Having Invented and Patented an Improved Double Cropping Machine, which has been thoroughly tested by practical parties, and pronounced by them to be faultless, would respectfully invite Manufacturers and Cloth Finishers to inspect the same, when the decided advantages possessed by it over all others will at once be seen, while its construction is so simple as to be as easily managed as a Single one, both Spirals being so placed as to be as accessible to the person in charge, and as easily controlled as one, and the Cloth is seen passing under them both in the same way as in ordinary Single Machines.

When working this Machine as a Single one, which is accomplished by simply throwing the Belt off one of the Spirals, the Cloth passes over only one bed and not both as in other Machines, and is therefore adapted to the finest Textures.

3½ Miles from the Station, Forth and Clyde Railway.

G. RENNIE

Begs to inform his friends and the public, that he has now opened that large and commodious Hotel at Port of Menteith, Perthshire, and from the extensive accommodation he has, and the strict attention to the comforts of those who may patronise him, hopes to merit a share of public favour. He may also state that there is a large and beautiful LOCH close at hand, where his customers may enjoy themselves by fishing and boating, with the Island of Inchmaholm, finely wooded, and containing considerable ruins, famous in olden times as an ancient priory and the family residence of the Earls of Menteith. The beauty of the surrounding scenery cannot be surpassed, and as the Railway is now opened to that place, there is every opportunity afforded to visitors.

PERTHSHIRE.

BALQUHIDDER.

LOCH EARN HEAD HOTEL.

(Her Majesty's Route on her First Visit to Scotland.)

This HOTEL—situated at the foot of the "wild Glen Ogle," and in the far-famed parish of Balquihidder—having been considerably enlarged, nearly rebuilt, and refurnished, offers first-class accommodation to Private Families, Tourists, and Travellers.

The views from the oriel windows of the Sitting Rooms and large new Coffee Rooms command the magnificent scenery of Loch Earn and the surrounding country, including the upper part of Strathearn.

The Proprietor takes this opportunity to thank those of his friends who have hitherto patronised his Hotel, and begs to assure them, and the Public generally, that no pains will be spared to increase their comfort and accommodation during their stay at his house.

The Hotel, from its beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with its many objects of interest in the locality and along the various routes above mentioned, is particularly adapted for Families or Parties who wish to stay any length of time. The Hotel is entirely supplied by the produce of the Farm connected with it.

Boats are kept for the use of parties for fishing on the Loch; and Carriages of all kinds are ready at a few minutes' notice for Posting or Driving.

There is a daily Mail, and a Four-horse Coach runs daily during the Summer Months to and from Callander and Aberfeldy Railway Stations.

HUBBUCK'S PATENT WHITE ZINC PAINT.

The most durable and beautiful Paint known, is cheaper than White Lead, and is proved to be superior for all purposes than the pernicious Lead Paint, and equally adapted for all climates.

Its whiteness is unaffected by bilge water, boiling sugar or noxious gases.

It is free from any poisonous ingredient, and suited in all respects to the use of the painter.

Each Cask of Pure White Zinc is Stamped "HUBBUCK, LONDON PATENT."

Inferior Zinc Paint, so marked, having been sold in Foreign Markets, the Patentees offer a REWARD of FIFTY POUNDS for information which will lead to the Conviction, in an English or Colonial Court, of those who have pirated their Mark. Both Exporters and Retailers are liable for its sale.

THE HEALTH OF OUR HOMES.—"Hubbuck's Patent White Zinc Paint" is entirely free from any poisonous or pernicious property. Furniture and Buildings painted with it are at once disinfected. Paralysis and Painter's colic are avoided. Apartments may be immediately occupied, without injury to the most delicate constitution. For public schools, and all rooms occupied by children, there will now be no excuse for using poisonous paints. Parents have remarked, that their children on returning from the country to newly-painted houses, have suffered in health. The reason is evident—the breath extracts the insidious poison from paint, and the lungs draw in the deadly vapour.

"Among other tests to which it has been subjected, has been that of painting the hold of a sugar vessel, which, after a voyage to St. Kitts and back, was found on being washed, to be as white as the first day the paint was applied."—John Bull, Sept. 14th, 1850.

HUBBUCK'S ANTI-OXIDATION COMPOSITION,

For Coating Iron and Wood Ships' Bottoms; a preservative against fouling and Corrosion. This Composition is ready for immediate use, and obviates the waste of carrying unmixed Paints, Oils, Driers, &c. It is also applicable to all the purposes of other Paints.

The Directors invite special attention to three most vital considerations:—

FIRST.—By publishing the details of their Balance Sheet, and of the principles adopted in their periodic Investigations, they enable every one interested to judge of the soundness and stability of the Company, and give the best guarantee for continued prudence in all their operations.

SECOND.—Whilst making the ample provision for future liabilities, of which the evidence has just been referred to, they have made Bonus Additions to their policies in the Life Assurance Branch at the rates successively of one pound; —one pound five shillings,—and one pound twelve shillings and six pence per Cent per annum. These Bonuses will stand a favourable comparison with those declared by the oldest and most successful Life Offices in Scotland, whether mutual or proprietary, when the relative rates of premium are taken into account.

THIRD.—Whilst thus providing for safety on the one hand, and for liberal Bonuses to the Assured on the other, the Directors have had the satisfaction of accumulating large additions to the Paid-up Capital and Reserve. These have greatly increased the security of the persons insured, and at the same time have improved the value of the Stock to the Shareholders in a degree far exceeding the experience of the great majority of Scottish as well as English offices, notwithstanding the greater age, and in some cases the more extensive transactions of these offices.

Every description of Life Assurance, Fire Insurance, and Annuity business transacted on the most favourable terms.

WHILE affording all the advantages and facilities usual with other Offices, this Institution possesses SPECIAL and ATTRACTIVE FEATURES peculiar to itself; and DURING THE TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS of its operations it has largely contributed to the extension of Life Assurance throughout the whole of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as British North America.

THE SYSTEM and REGULATIONS have been framed, and from time to time improved, so as to secure to the Policyholders not only the utmost value for their Payments, but especially the following:—

As SMALL PRESENT OUTLAY as possible.
NO RESPONSIBILITY, whether of Partnership or Mutual Assurance.
NO LIABILITY TO FORFEITURE, or so little that only gross carlessness can effect the Policy.
A LIBERAL RETURN to the Policyholder, if he desire to relinquish his Policy; or,
THE LOAN of a Sum nearly equal to its OFFICE-VALUE without cancelling the Policy.

Assurers have the Choice of Two Schemes, each of which has its peculiar and distinctive advantages:

ORDINARY ASSURANCE.

Class (A)—By which the expense of Life Assurance is reduced to the lowest scale consistent with security, the Profits being applied in reducing the Premiums.

UNCONDITIONAL ASSURANCE.

Class (B)—Under which the Policies are in effect Non-forfeitable and Unquestionable. There are no restrictions as to Residence or Occupation.

A CONSIDERABLE PORTION OF THE PAYMENTS required for a Policy for the first six or ten years may also REMAIN UNPAID so long as the Assured pleases, without at all affecting the Assurance otherwise. Present Outlay is also further diminished by means of the Association's INCREASING POLICIES, in which the Sums Assured increase by the mere lapse of time to double the original amount; while the Premiums payable by the Policyholders either remain fixed, or, in the Participating Class, are reducible by application of Profits.

THE STANDARD

In the

SCOTTISH WIDOWS' FUND

THE LARGEST MUTUAL LIFE OFFICE IN THE WORLD

The Whole Profits are divided among the Members.

The Extent and Profitable Result of the Society's Business, and the prospects of its Policyholders, are sufficiently indicated by the following facts :

Magnitude and Wealth.

Existing Assurances, including Bonus additions	£13,700,000
Invested Funds	4,270,000
Annual Revenue.....	545,000

Profit Realised.

Profit from 1815 to 1845, 31 years.....	£708,968
Profit from 1846 to 1852, 7 years	*591,158
Profit from 1853 to 1859, 7 years	*724,117
Total Profit to 1859.....	£2,024,243

* These enormous surplus sums of £591,158 and £724,117 yielded on the original Sums assured an average

Bonus of £2 5s. per cent per annum,

Believed to be the LARGEST BONUS declared by any Life Assurance Institution since the Society was founded in 1815.

New Business in 1865.

New Assurances exceed	£1,040,000
New Premiums (two single Premiums £411) exceed.....	35,000

This immense New Business does not include any "Re-assurances with other Offices" (as is usual in Life Assurance accounts), not a single Policy having been issued above the Society's limit of risk.

CLAIMS PAID.

During the year 1865 the Claims paid to the Families and Representatives of Members amounted to £332,000, the total sum so paid since the Society was founded in 1815 being upwards of FIVE MILLIONS.

CLAIMANTS' TITLE.

By Special Act of Parliament, dated 28th June, 1861, Claims under Policies on the lives of English and Irish Members are payable to Holders of Probate or Letters of Administration without any Scotch Title or Registration.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

The magnitude of the Society's Business, Funds, Revenues, and Profits; the scale on which all these are increasing; and the purely Mutual principle under which the Society's affairs are conducted for the sole benefit of the Assured, justify the expectation, that in the SCOTTISH WIDOWS' FUND every benefit of which the system of Life Assurance is capable will be realized. Forms of Proposal and Prospectuses sent free of charge on application.

This Society differs in its principles from any other Office.

INSTEAD of charging rates admittedly higher than are necessary, and afterwards returning the excess, or a portion of it, in the shape of periodical Bonuses, it gives from the first as large an assurance as the Premiums will with safety bear—reserving the Whole Surplus for those Members who have lived long enough to secure the common fund from loss on account of their individual Assurances.

A Policy for £1200 to £1250 may thus at most ages be had for the Premium elsewhere charged to assure £1000 only; while the result of the equitable mode of reserving the surplus has been, that Policies originally for £1000, which have shared at two septennial Investigations, have already been increased to £1300, £1500, and even to £1700—to be further increased (in the case of those which may then subsist) at the Division of Profits to be made at the close of the present year.

ITS TERMS are therefore well calculated to meet the requirements of intending Assurers; and they are specially adapted to the case of Provisions under Family Settlements or otherwise, where it is of importance to secure, for the smallest present outlay, a competent provision, of definite amount, in the case of early death.

Examples of Annual Premiums to insure £100 at Death with Profits.

Age 25	30	35	40	45	50
£1 18 0	£2 1 6	£2 6 10	£2 14 9	£3 5 9	£4 1 7

At the close of the year 1865 there had been issued in all above 15,000 Policies. The Subsisting Assurances then exceeded Five Millions. The Annual Revenue was £200,000, and the Accumulated Fund, arising entirely from Premiums, upwards of £1,130,000—all invested in unexceptionable securities in this country.

Advantages offered by the Caledonian Insurance Company—

Increased Bonuses have been declared at each division of Profits.

Credit given for half the Premium for the first seven years, or one third of the Premium for life.

The Payments may be Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually.

A Policy can be made to determine at a stipulated age, or sooner, in case of death.

A Prospective or interim Bonus equal to an Annual Division of Profits, given to Policies of Five Years' standing, which emerge between Periodical Investigations of the Life Business.

Charges of Management are unusually small, thus securing to Policy-holders large returns.

Under the ordinary Policies which the Company now issue to non-seafaring men, in time of peace, permission is given to travel throughout Europe, or remain in any part thereof, to go to and reside in Canada, the United States of America (north of lat. 38°), New Zealand, Australia, and many other places, FREE OF CHARGE.

All undue restrictions removed, and a liberal interpretation given to Policies, so as to render them as serviceable as possible to the holders.

No extra Premium required from those belonging to Volunteer Rifle or Artillery Corps.

POLICY-HOLDERS incur no liability of Partnership, the Company being a Proprietary one.

The Company holds itself liable should death occur during the thirty days of grace, which are allowed for renewal, provided the Premium be paid within that time.

A Policy can be renewed, if allowed to drop, within thirteen months, on a certificate of health being given and a fine paid.

After three yearly payments the surrender value of a Policy will at once be lent at a moderate rate of interest. The convenience of this is obvious.

Fire Department.

Nearly all classes of risk are insured by the Company, and at rates as low as are consistent with safety. Claims are adjusted with liberality, and settled with promptitude. Losses by gas explosions, in property insured by the Company, admitted, and property burnt by lightning paid for. The COMPANY was established in the year 1837, for the transaction of all varieties of Life and Fire Assurance Business. Its subscribed Capital is £1,000,000 sterling, held in Ten Thousand Shares by a numerous and wealthy Proprietary widely scattered throughout England and Scotland.

The COMPANY has obtained two special Acts of Parliament conferring on it various powers and privileges; and is one of those approved of by the Postmaster-General for the assurance of the lives of the Post-office Officials.

The BUSINESS of the Company, both Life and Fire, is largely increasing year by year.

ALL CLAIMS are settled with liberality and the utmost promtitude, in order that the full benefit of the assistance and relief which Assurance is designed to afford should be secured to Assurers or their representatives.

The LARGE CAPITAL of the Company, and the Reserve Fund in hand, are guarantees of perfect security to Policy-holders, who are in no way involved in the mutual liabilities of partnership.

A CASH BONUS of 22 PER CENT., equivalent to a REVERSIONARY BONUS of from 30 to 60 PER CENT., according to the age of the Assured, was declared at the last Division of Profits.

IN ITS PATENTED FORM.

HILL & SMITH'S Patented Invention consists in notching the edge of the flat horizontal bars at the distances the Standards are placed apart, so that when the bars are placed in the Standards, these notches fit into the mortice holes of the Standards, and prevent either the displacement of the one or the withdrawal of the other. A small iron PATENT SPLIT WEDGE is used over the notch, which prevents the bars being raised out of place, and when this is driven "home," if the split is opened, it is impossible the wedge can work out. This forms an arrangement that is at once efficient and agreeable to the eye.

WIRE FENCE MATERIALS, consisting of BRIGHT ANNEALED, or GALVANIZED SOLID WIRE, GALVANIZED STRAND or ROPE WIRE, all of the best quality; STANDARDS, STRAINING POSTS, plain, or with Registered WINDING APPARATUS, Staples. PATENT HYPER-SPERM OIL

The attention of SPINNERS, MANUFACTURERS, MACHINISTS, and others is respectfully called to the HYPER-SPERM OIL, the use of which will effect a very great saving to them. This Oil has been thoroughly tested by M'NAUGHT, the Inventor of the "Friction Test," and pronounced by him to run even lighter on the test than Sperm Oil, while its lasting properties are fully as great. The HYPER-SPERM is solely manufactured from Animal matter, and is pronounced by Analytical Chemists to be entirely free from the Acids and Vitriol which make the cheap Vegetable and Mineral Oils so destructive to Machinery; and, while it keeps up the speed, it preserves the Machinery and saves Fuel —a much smaller quantity being required.

PORTOBELLO ADVERTISER,

And Leith, Musselburgh, and Dalkeith Weekly Review.

PRICE, 1d. and 2d.

The "ADVERTISER" circulates in Edinburgh and the above towns, and since its establishment in January, 1864, it has attained a popular standing as a provincial journal and advertising medium for the business houses of Edinburgh and neighbouring burghs.

The importance of Portobello as a fashionable watering place is every year becoming more widely recognised. The town is frequented by thousands every year from all parts of Great Britain. It is only within the last twenty-three years that those measures have been adopted which have raised Portobello to its present important standing, as one of the cleanest, healthiest, and most cheerful places for summer residence in Scotland, which, taken in connection with its beautiful and safe beach, may deservedly claim and uphold the cognomen of "The Brighton of Scotland." Therefore, the above medium for public announcements cannot fail to prove beneficial to business men.

A large discount allowed for repeated advertisements. Books and Periodicals carefully reviewed.

THE EDINBURGH COURANT.

ESTABLISHED 1718.

The proprietors of this old and high class Newspaper, which has for so many years maintained its position in the foremost ranks of the Edinburgh Press, are gratified to announce that since its Enlargement in April 1865, to an Eight Page Paper Daily (the size of the London Newspapers), its general circulation has very largely increased. They have therefore every confidence in recommending it to all Classes as an advantageous advertising medium. The COURANT has always maintained the position of a Leading Journal, and circulates extensively, not only among the Mercantile Community, but also among the Upper and Wealthier Classes and Capitalists of the Country.

To Landed Proprietors and the Legal Profession it is especially suitable for advertising Estates for Sale, Mansion-houses, Fishings, Shootings, Farms to Let, and Heritable Property generally, it having for a long course of years continued to circulate largely among the Landed Gentry and Farmers in the Country.

The Scale of Charges for inserting Advertisments in the COURANT, is 4d. per line.

PUBLISHED DAILY, Price 1d.;

QUARTERLY SUBSCRIPTION, Payable in Advance, 7s.: STAMPED, 13s. 6d.

THE attention of Advertisers is directed to the unrivalled medium which the Scotsman presents for announcements intended to reach the entire population of Scotland, where its circulation is universal, and the Northern Counties of England. In direct communication with the Head Office in Edinburgh, there are in Country Towns upwards of Five Hundred Special Agencies to which parcels of Unstamped Copies are forwarded every morning, and in this way the paper is brought within the reach of the entire population without the expense of postage. While the columns of the Scotsman afford the very best means of bringing announcements before the notice of the Gentry, Professional Men, Merchants, Tradesmen, and others in Edinburgh, Glasgow, &c.; its circulation in such towns as Aberdeen, Inverness, Perth, Dundee, Hawick, Dumfries, Berwick, Elgin, Stirling, Wick, Thurso, Peterhead, Dunfermline, Kirkcaldy, Cupar, St. Andrews, Haddington, Falkirk, Linlithgow, Galashiels, Jedburgh, Selkirk, Kelso, Melrose, Newton Stewart, Wigtown, Castle Douglas, Kirkcudbright, Stranraer, and indeed in every town and village in Scotland, is also so general as to give it in each place all the advantages possessed by local papers. For Advertisements of Estates, or Properties for Sale, and similar announcements, the Scotsman presents an invaluable medium of publicity, as it is regularly subscribed for by Agents and others interested in such matters; and through no other single medium could the same amount of general and varied circulation be secured.

The Latest News of all kinds, up to the hour of publication, will be found in the columns of the Scotsman. A Special Telegraph Wire between London and Edinburgh is engaged at great expense for the exclusive use of the Scotsman, and a staff of reporters and correspondents is employed in London for the collection of news, all of which is specially telegraphed. By this arrangement news published in the London morning papers appears simultaneously in the Scotsman, thus anticipating their arrival by nearly a day. Special reporters and correspondents are also engaged in all the Scotch and in the leading English towns, and their despatches are forwarded by train or telegraph, so that the news of the day from all parts of the kingdom may appear in the Scotsman of the following morning.

Besides devoting great attention to the discussion of all the Political, Social, Ecclesiastical, and Literary questions of the day, the Scotsman gives daily in its Money Article the fullest information, specially telegraphed, on all Commercial Subjects. Reports of the Staple Manufactures and Trades, prepared by the best authorities in each department, are regularly published; and great attention is paid to Monetary and Banking Subjects, no expense being spared in order to secure the earliest possible information of all the movements in the Money Market and in Commercial Circles. The Announcements of Public Companies, and all Notices in which Merchants, Capitalists, and others are specially interested, appear therefore most appropriately, and to the greatest advantage, in the Scotsman.

Reviews of Books, and the discussion of all questions connected with Literature, Science, and Art, have always received great prominence in the Scotsman, the different topics being treated by the best writers in their respective departments in the Kingdom. Being thus recognised as a leading authority in such matters, its columns are peculiarly suited to Literary Announcements of all kinds.

THE WEEKLY SCOTSMAN.

CIRCULATION, 60,000 COPIES EACH IMPRESSION.

A Large Eight-Page Paper of Forty-Eight Columns, Price One Penny, Sold by all News-Agents in Scotland, and in London, Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham, Bristol, Newcastle, Carlisle, and all the leading English Towns, every Saturday Morning. Price 9s. per Annum, Stamped and Free by Post.

The Weekly Scotsman contains a Complete Epitome of the Scotch, English, and General News of the Week; a Careful Digest of the Parliamentary Proceedings during the Session; Foreign and Colonial News; Original Articles—Political, Social, and Literary; and all the most Interesting News of the Week. It is a First-Class Family Newspaper, and is specially adapted to suit the wants of those who may not have the time or opportunity for the perusal of a Daily Paper. The rapid increase of its Circulation, which has been multiplied EIGHT-FOLD within the last Four Years, and is now annually adding 15,000 Copies to its weekly impression, shows its admirable adaptability to the wants of Large Classes of the Community. As matters of merely local interest are excluded from its Columns, the Weekly Scotsman is peculiarly adapted for general circulation.

With a circulation of 60,000 Copies each impression, it is scarcely necessary to remark that the Weekly Scotsman is an Advertising Medium affording almost unparalleled advantages for circulating announcements among the reading portion of the Working Classes, Tradesmen, and the entire population of districts in which Daily Papers are not commonly read.

WAVERLEY PEN

PATENT.

1s. per Box; by Post, 1s. 2d.

Important to Writers, Clergymen, Business Men, Writers for the Press, Teachers, &c., &c

"This Pen is the best Pen we have ever tried. By an arrangement of the point, it almost makes the hand run after it, so facile and so pleasant is it."—GREENOCK HERALD.

The manufacturers of the WAVERLEY PENS beg to draw the attention of the public to the superiority of the Waverley Pen for all purposes of quick writing. The use of the Waverley Pen does not fatigue the hand, though used for many hours at a time. It is the only steel pen that can be used with freedom on rough paper. This pen has had the largest sale of any pen ever made. Though made only a few months, many millions of them have been sold, and hundreds of satisfactory notices have appeared in the public press. The Waverley Pen is patent, and the public are cautioned against buying any without trade mark on box, "The Sword and the Pen." Traders are cautioned against buying or selling any infringement of this patent, as they are liable in damages for so doing.

What a Writer for the Press says of it:

"PENS.—Bad pens are provocative of—what shall I say? Ill-humour; yes, that is the mildest word I can find to express my meaning. Those who, like myself, scribble for the press, know the value of a good pen; but how to find one has always to me been a more difficult problem than that 'asses' bridge' which puzzled my young brain. I must say, however, that the 'Q.E.D.' of the steel pen problem has at last been made clear. An article has been produced by MACNIVEN & CAMERON, of Edinburgh, which bears the name of the 'Waverley Pen,' that must ultimately supersede all others. It possesses all the flexibility and smoothness of the quill, and is the best steel pen I have ever written with. Those who try the 'Waverley' once will, I am convinced, use it ever afterwards. To the great mass of suffering humanity called literary, that eat paper and drink ink, I cannot confer a greater benefit than by recommending to their notice the best steel pen extant for rapid and easy writing."—Newcastle Chronicle.

D. MINTO

In returning thanks for past favours, desires to intimate, that he has lately fitted-up additional Sugar Grinding Machinery, rendering that branch of his establishment more improved and extensive; and thereby affording greater facilities to Confectioners, Biscuit Manufacturers, and the trade in general of having their Sugar ground in a manner suitable to their various requirements; while due attention is being observed towards those other branches for Coffee Roasting, Coffee, Spice, and Drug Grinding; so that Grocers, Chemists, Druggists, and others shall have advantage of every improvement that may be suggested.

P.S.—All Orders punctually attended to, and delivered by his Vans at the proper time.

The COFFEE PLANT "Coffea Arabica," of Linnæus, is an evergreen, and, as may be inferred from its scientific name, is a native of Arabia. It produces a pulpy berry about the size of a small cherry, enclosing two seeds, which, separated from their pulpy envelope, form the well-known Coffee Beans of commerce. It may be remarked, as a singular fact in reference to Coffee, that while all the vegetable kingdom that have been taken under the care of man have been improved, it alone asserts its independence; for, although cultivation may greatly enlarge the crop, it as certainly, at the same time, deteriorates the flavour, and the produce of the wild plant still maintains the highest figure in the market. It is well known that Coffee would be of no real value were it not properly roasted—a process which, as it requires much skill, is only to be acquired by experience. How man became acquainted with the fact, that the tasteless seeds of a berry, when roasted, ground, and infused, would form a grateful beverage, will most probably remain a secret to the end of time. That the development of its useful properties depends wholly upon the roasting, is evident. About two hundred years ago, Coffee was first introduced into England, since which its consumption has steadily increased, and deservedly so, when its Medicinal properties are considered, it having been found useful in headaches arising from a particular state of the stomach, and much benefit having been derived from its exhibition in cases of Asthma.

A French scientific gentleman, who has directed his attention to the subject, says:—"I have found that Coffee is better roasted, and more of the aroma retained, when a double cylinder is used—the air between the interior and exterior cylinders acting as a non-conductor of heat. It is done more uniformly, while the essential oil on which the aroma depends is less liable to be dispersed, than when exposed to the fierce heat of a fire in a single cylinder."

In the double rotary globular method of roasting, as practised at Mr. MINTO'S Works, Macpherson Street, GLASGOW, the above principal is acted upon, inasmuch as the globe (which has superseded the cylinder since the application of steam power to this branch), revolves in a medium of heated air, which, experience has shown, best prevents the dispersion of the essential oil, or aroma.

THE OLDEST OIL ENGINEERS IN THE TRADE

ARE

GEORGE BENNIE & CO.

OF

KINNING PARK FOUNDRY,

GLASGOW,

The only Establishment devoted entirely to the Casting of Oil Makers' Plant.

The following is reprinted from "Our Oil-Producing Districts," a series of articles now appearing in "The Grocer and Oil Trade Review."—See number for January, 1866 :—

"Where and How the Retorts, Stills, and Furnaces are Made.—As this is the only one exclusively devoted to the wants of Oil Makers that up to the present time has come under our notice, we cannot do better than refer to it in detail. In doing so we have no desire to ignore the existence of several enterprising firms in various parts of the country which have already earned a leading reputation among oilmen. Some of these we have had occasion to mention in our reports upon the various oil works already published, while others wait to be disentangled from the mass of notes before us."

"The Kinning Park Foundry covers about two acres of ground, and is situated on the Paisley Road, Glasgow. Here are cast not only retorts of every description that science or caprice may call into existence, but entire works are planned; and from here men are sent out to erect complete works, from the digging of the foundations up to the supply of all the trifling utensils used by oil makers. We were shown elaborate plans of works, various in extent and widely apart in situation, the terms of the contracts being that the founders should hand over the works to the several proprietors before next season with the furnaces lighted and the oil running. The stills, the smallest of which is made to hold fifteen or seventeen hundred gallons, are cast in an immense shed in moulds formed in the ground, and the number produced at this manufactory averages two per day. Mr. Bennie has adopted the plan of casting his stills bottom downwards, having found from experience that when a still comes to grief while in use the crack always takes place at the bottom of the vessel. By casting them, however, in the manner described, the bottom has the advantage of the additional thickness imparted to it by the tendency of the molten lead to settle towards the base. At the time of our visit the two courtyards belonging to the foundry contained a large number of oval, D, and upright retorts waiting for despatch, and forming a portion of three hundred, besides fifty stills, destined for various intending and established oil makers. In various parts of the premises six cranes, of thirty tons' power each, are used for transferring the ponderous vessels from one point to another. In the principal yard, also, a large derrick is used for placing the retorts and stills upon the transit wagons. The furnace which supplies the moulds in the shed used for casting the retorts is capable of melting ten tons of metal every hour, and one blast furnace is also occasionally used which will liquify a charge of fifty tons. Adding to the number of men employed in the establishment those at work in various parts of the country, this firm, we are informed, employ nearly three hundred hands."

"When an estimate and plans have been submitted to an intending oil maker, or one who desires to extend his works, and the contract is concluded, Mr. Bennie, to whose energy and promptitude the success of the business is in a great measure due, takes the personal superintendence of the work, his time being occupied chiefly in travelling over the country from one manufactory to another for this purpose."

GLASGOW.

(CORNER OF WEST CAMPBELL STREET).

MR. MACLEAN has the honour to announce that the New Premises, 198 St. Vincent Street, Glasgow, specially erected, fitted up, and furnished for the business of a FIRST-CLASS HOTEL, are now complete in every department.

MACLEAN'S HOTEL is situated in a pleasant and fashionable district of the city, and in immediate proximity to the Exchange, all the Banks, and principal places of business. It is only a few minutes' drive from the several Railway Termini and Steamboat Quays; in short, it is of easy access to almost every place of importance in the city.

The elevated locality, and the superiority of the streets and buildings in the neighbourhood, render the Hotel, in point of amenity, peculiarly salubrious, healthy, and agreeable. It is thus entirely free from the continual noise and dust inseparable from all leading thoroughfares of a great city.

Great care, and the ripest experience have been bestowed upon the construction, arrangement, and furnishing of the various departments. The Bed-Rooms are large, agreeably ventilated, and in every detail comfortable. Apartments have also been formed en suite replete with all family conveniences.

The general Dining-Room is without exception the most spacious and elegant in the West of Scotland. The Ladies', and the Gentlemen's Coffee-Rooms and the Parlours are in every respect suitable, combining comfort and luxury. The Billiard and Smoking Saloons have been specially planned and adapted for these respective purposes.

From the long and extensive experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Maclean, it is almost superfluous to mention that the Cellar, the Larder, the Cuisine, and the general management of the Hotel will be found superior, and perfected to the requirements of an establishment of the highest class.

From the construction of this Machine, it is self-correcting, printing the figures in a straight line, without variation or error, while the greatest facility is afforded the operator in laying over the leaves or sheets while in process of working, the Machine having a parallel motion which causes the figures to recede at each stroke.

TESTIMONIALS.

GLASGOW, 20*th January*, 1865.

Gentlemen.—After four years' experience in having my wood cut by your Board Cutting Machine, I have much pleasure in testifying to the advantages derived therefrom, especially as regards timber of any value, where the merchant has the advantage of seeing the quality of the log as each board is taken off, and so has the option of changing the size or putting it to any other purpose for which it may be suitable; and also the saving of wood, as by your system of sawing, and the thinness and fine set of the saw blade, I fully believe, in cutting thin wood the merchant has an extra board in every square foot more than by any other process of sawing at present in use, independently of never failing equality in the thickness of each board; so much so, that after frequent trial from time to time with callipers I have never found the slightest difference even in boards ½ inch thick and 34 inches broad, a feature seldom found in the ordinary process of sawing wood, and of great moment to the manufacturer of sawn timber. Trusting soon to hear of your Machines being in operation all over the country, I am, Gentlemen, very truly yours (Signed) JAMES MOWAT.

To the Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co., St. James' Road, Glasgow.

Messrs. The Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co. 75 Wellington Street, GLASGOW, January 23rd, 1865.

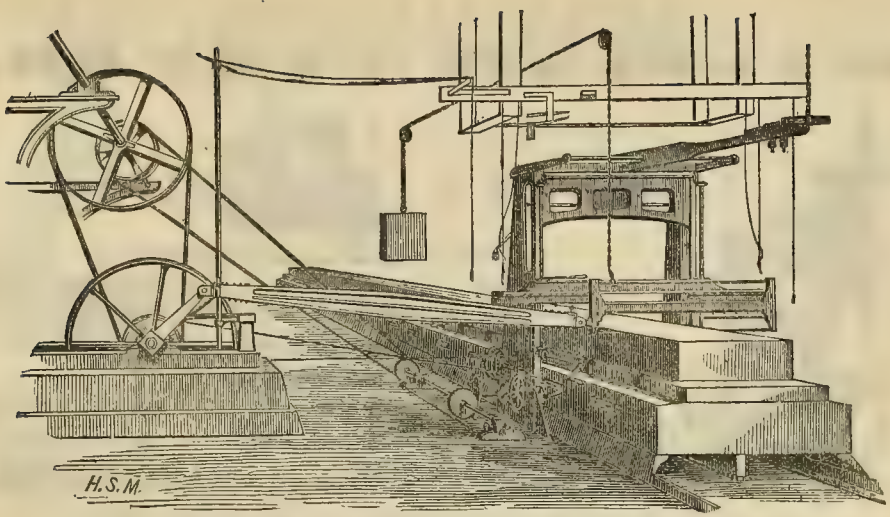
Gentlemen.—We have great pleasure in testifying to the superiority of your Machines for cutting mahogany and hard woods over any other we have seen in use. The cutting is most perfect as well as economical, and a great advantage derived is, that by cutting the boards in rotation the thickness of each board can be made to answer the purpose for which it is suitable. This proves a great saving in mahogany and other valuable woods, as the sound boards can be cut from both sides of the log before proceeding to break up the centre.

We are, yours respectfully (Signed) MUIR & THOMSON.

To the Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co. 33 Hope Street, GLASGOW, 24*th January*, 1865.

Gentlemen.—I have great pleasure in recommending your Board Cutting Machines. I have been in the trade for a quarter of a century, and I say confidently they are the best machines for cutting mahogany and other valuable woods I have ever seen. They require but to be seen working to be appreciated.

I am, Gentlemen, respectfully yours (Signed) JAMES MORTON.



Mr. T. A. Prale, GLASGOW, 25*th January*, 1865.

Dear Sir.—I have had timber cut at your Patent Saw Mills nearly all the time you have been here, and have much pleasure in expressing my satisfaction with your system of board cutting.

Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co., GLASGOW. I am, dear Sir, yours truly (Signed) ANDW. M'MORLAND.

Terms and further particulars can be ascertained from the Manager, Mr. F. F. VON AHN, and the Machine can be seen in operation every lawful day, at the Works of the VICTORIA PATENT SAW MILLS COMPANY, 103 ST. JAMES' ROAD, GLASGOW.

ADVANTAGES OF THE MACHINE.

1.—The Machine is very easily driven, not requiring more than two horses' power.

2.—One man can easily attend to it, and as four saws are always provided, to be changed in rotation, it need not stand idle for want of a sharp saw.

3.—A blunt saw can be changed for a sharp one in about a minute.

4.—When a cut is through, the saw need not be stopped, but may remain in motion ready to commence the next cut.

5.—The thickness cut may be altered at every cut without stopping the saw; and the adjustment for a different thickness does not require half a minute.

6.—The wood can be fixed to the carriage in about five minutes.

7.—More than one log can be fixed to the carriage at the same time, to be cut in succession.

8.—The saw cuts in both directions of its motion, and so quickly that although only a single board is cut at a time, 100 to 120 feet are cut within the hour.

9.—A self-acting oil feeder lubricates the slides, avoiding dust, and requiring no attention excepting to supply it with oil every second or third day.

10.—An arrangement, requiring no time to bring into action, permits of a ⅜-in. board being sawn into two equal thicknesses, whilst with it twisted boards can be made quite level.

11.—The machine will cut 36-in. wide, and carriages 30 feet long are in use; but the carriage could easily be made 40 feet, 45 feet, or longer if required.

Messrs. J. & A. Caldwell, Glasgow. Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co., 103 St. James' Road, Glasgow, 3rd November, 1865.

Dear Sirs.—Having inspected and carefully examined the construction and working of the Victoria Board Cutting Machine, made by you, under our Mr. Prale's Patent, for Messrs. John Taylor & Son, Edinburgh; Cabinet Makers and Upholsterers to Her Majesty, we have much pleasure in stating that we are completely satisfied, and in every way pleased with the manner in which you have executed the machine; and we have therefore every confidence in the success of any further machines you may undertake.

Yours respectfully, for the Victoria Patent Saw Mills Co., F. F. VON AHN, Manager.

Messrs. J. & A. Caldwell, Engineers, Glasgow. 109 Princes Street, Edinburgh, 4th November, 1865.

Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in informing you that the Board Cutting Machine you fitted-up in our works last month, continues to give us the greatest satisfaction, not only in the superior quality of the sawing, but also in the great saving effected in the wood.

We remain, your most obedient Servants, JOHN TAYLOR & SON,

We are, Gentlemen, your obedient Servants, WARD & OLIVER.

Improved

PATENT FUEL ECONOMIZER

FOR STEAM BOILERS.

This Apparatus, after having been applied to all sorts of Boilers in England, Ireland, Scotland, and the Continent, and subjected to every variety of trial, through a period of several years, still holds its position as the best and most efficient means of Heating the Feed Water with the Waste or Residual Heat from Steam Boilers, and thus effects a positive Saving of from 20 to 25 per cent of the Fuel, besides considerably reducing the "wear and tear" in the working of the Boilers, by furnishing, as it does, a constant supply of Feed Water at a high and uniform Temperature.

The recent Improvements in the ECONOMIZER, especially in the self-acting scraping or cleaning Apparatus, render it still more worthy of general adoption.

N.B.—The ECONOMIZER is now in successful operation to about 500,000 Horse Power.

At the Annual Meeting of Proprietors, held on the 26th October, 1865—BERNARD HALL, ESQ., Chairman of the Company, in the Chair—the Directors' Report for the year stated:—

That the FIRE PREMIUMS FOR THE YEAR amounted to.....	£115,285
That 529 LIFE POLICIES were issued insuring	304,777
That the NEW LIFE PREMIUMS amounted to	8,058
That the LIFE INCOME was	27,756
And that upwards of 57 per Cent of the entire Net Premiums had been added to the Life Fund.
That the SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL amounted to.....	1,883,220
That the PAID-UP CAPITAL was	188,322
And that the RESERVE FUNDS amount to.....	147,638

The LIFE BONUS of this Company averaged 40 per cent of the Premiums paid, in some cases rising to £65, £70, and even £75 per cent. Substantial benefits have therefore been conferred on its Assurers; and as the Life Liabilities are valued on the principle of net Premiums, assuming only 3 per cent interest—(the outside expenses chargeable to the Life Department, for the General Management of the Company being specially limited by the Deed of Settlement to 10 per cent of the net Life Income)—there is every reason to expect equally good Bonuses in the future.

HOME and FOREIGN FIRE and LIFE INSURANCES at Rates as moderate as those of other first-class Offices.

THE DIRECTORS INVITE APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH

EUSTON ROAD, LONDON.

General Directions for the use of Morison the Hygeist's Medicines.

Forty years' use of these Medicines (Morison's Pills) by the public has proved their efficacy and harmless, and the truth of Mr. Morison's theory—to the cure of disease, Nature consists only of Vegetable Matter or Mineral Herbs, they are found by EXPERIENCE to be HARMLESS TO THE MOST TENDER AGE, or the weakest frame, whilst on an adequate human suffering; the most pleasant and benign in their operation ever offered to the world; and at the same time, the most certain in searching out the root of any complaint, however deep, and of performing a cure, if within the reach of human means.

The Medicines consist of three sorts, tending to the same purpose—that is, to cleanse and purify the blood and fluids. They are named:—

No. 1 Pills. No. 2 Pills. The Vegetable Aperient Powder.

The effect of these Medicines is to produce FREE AND COPIOUS EVACUATIONS. Being composed of innocuous ingredients, no fear need be entertained of LARGE DOSES. Experience has pointed out the following as a proper method of using the Medicine at first. In all slow and chronic disorders, when instantaneous relief cannot be expected, begin with No 1, taking from four to six at bedtime. The next night take a similar dose of No 2. If the Medicine does not operate EASILY and COPIOUSLY by eight o'clock in the morning, the next night increase the dose one, two, or more pills, which will secure the desired effect. You may eat and drink what you please, spirituous liquors excepted, and need not be apprehensive of catching cold. Should No. 2 occasion thirst or retching towards the morning, it is chiefly a sign that the Medicine is acting upon the corrupt acrimonious humours. In this case the Aperient Powder would be useful.

In acute and violent disorders, such as fevers of all kinds, pleurisies, inflammations, hooping cough, measles, small-pox, apoplexy, epilepsy, faintings, colic, indigestion, experience has proved that of No 2 from ten to fifteen pills, or even more, should be taken. The dose may in most cases be repeated every twelve hours, till relief be ensured.

Children under 12 years of age may begin with two pills, but if they do not operate freely, increase them until they do. Nos. 1 and 2 should be used alternately, where immediate relief cannot be expected.

The Vegetable Aperient Powder has a very pleasant acidulated flavour, and it much assists the action of the pills. A quarter of a box should be mixed in water, and taken twice a day.

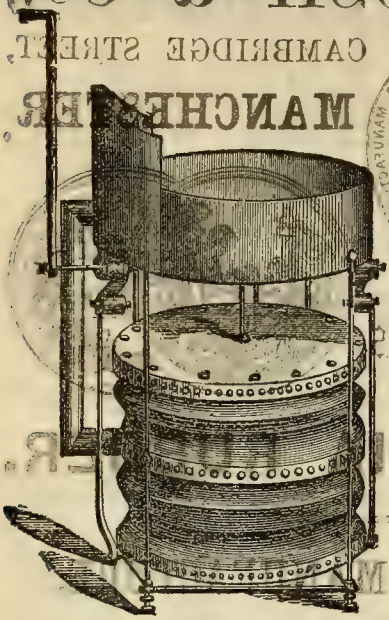
Full directions for the use of Morison's Medicines may be summed up in a few words. Diseases of long standing require perseverance; acute diseases large doses; diseases that are both acute and chronic perseverance with large doses, until the acute affection is removed; and this is to be succeeded by the use of both kinds according to their effects, until the disease gradually disappears.

It is highly important that parties taking these medicines should make use of no other at the same time. The British College of Health will not be responsible for the consequences which may follow the administration of drugs having a tendency to counteract or suspend the operation of the Vegetable Universal Medicine.

Patients will please to observe that should any flying pains occur, they are merely caused by the action of the Medicine upon the bilious and other foul matter; which will immediately subside upon a passage being obtained; and should the person be subject to flatulence, the "VEGETABLE POWDER" will greatly assist in expelling it.

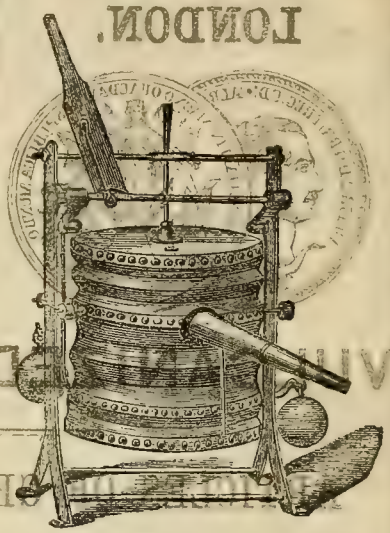
All persons making use of the Medicine are referred to Mr. Morison's work, the "Morisoniana," which is to be had from the Agents.

Sold in boxes at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d, and 4s. 6d.; family packets, 11s. each.



Also the Vegetable Aperient Powders, 1s. 1½d., per box.

MORISON'S UNIVERSAL OINTMENT.



This Ointment is recommended as the best external application in all cases of Wounds, Cutaneous Eruptions, &c. In Pots at 1s. 1½d, and 2s 9d. each.

The above Vegetable Universal Medicines are sold by the Hygeian Agents, and all Medicine Vendors.

ROYAL NATIONAL COMMERCIAL DIRECTORY

OF

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, HEREFORDSHIRE, MONMOUTHSHIRE, SHROPSHIRE, AND NORTH & SOUTH WALES.

I. SLATER, the Proprietor and Publisher (the Surviving Partner of the eminent firm of PIGOT & CO.) so long and so often before the public as the only Compiler of DIRECTORIES for the whole of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, announces the preparation of this Edition.

From the following synopsis, it will be seen that the arrangement heretofore adopted will not be materially departed from, but that every improvement will be introduced that subsequent experience has dictated:—

The Cities, Towns, and Villages will appear in alphabetical order, enlivened by topographical descriptions, exhibiting the present state of the Manufactures and Commerce; their Municipal Government, Courts of Law, Public Institutions, and Schools; and the periods of holding Markets and Fairs. Public Buildings, Antiquities, and every object of immediate interest will receive due attention. The proximate Villages will be incorporated with the nearest town.

The names of the Nobility, Gentry, and Clergy, and Professional Gentlemen, Manufacturers, and Traders, will be displayed in Classified Lists.

The Embellishments will consist of a Map each of Gloucestershire, Herefordshire, Monmouthshire, and Shropshire, ornamented by a Vignette Engraving of the principal Ecclesiastical Building in each County, and a large sheet Map of North and South Wales, all engraved on Steel; and upon which will be conspicuously laid down every Railway in operation, and those for which Acts of Parliament have been obtained.

Milners' Gunpowder-proof, Drill-proof, Picklock-proof, Solid Locks, and Solid Lock Cases and Doors, applied to all Milners' Safes, afford the only security against a Safe being blown open by filling the Locks through the key-hole with gunpowder, the method now so generally adopted by burglars in violating Safes. Milners' Fire-resisting Chests List 1, and Fire-resisting Safes List 2, are recommended for the protection of Books, Deeds, &c. from Fire and not against Robbery. Milners' Strong Holdfast and Fire-resisting Safes, Lists 3, 4, 5, and their Double Bankers' Safes, List 6, are recommended for the custody of cash, plate, and valuables, increasing in strength from List 3 progressively to List 6, which are all secured by Milners' Screw, Wedge, and Crowbar Guards against the modern Burglar; especially against the novel mode of attack used by the Casely gang in the Cornhill Robbery. DEPOTS—6, Lord Street, Liverpool; 29, Market Street, Manchester; Leeds; Queen Street, Hull; London, 47A, Moorgate Street, City, near the Bank of England. Descriptive Circulars free by post.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A new invention, called the Needle Latch or Patent Unpickable Lock, has just been introduced, which promises from its simplicity and moderate cost to bring an apparently almost infallible protection for desks, safes, &c. within the means of all."—"Times" 12th Oct., 1866.

"We have examined many of these locks, and have a favourable opinion of them both as regards principle and workmanship. The price at which these locks are sold is very moderate."—The Engineer, of 28th Sept. 1866.

"The needles move obliquely, perpendicularly, laterally, and indeed in any direction; hence the difficulty in raising all the needles with an instrument simultaneously to their required positions to run through their own apertures, and escape the many traps set for them in the shape of a number of holes pierced nearly half-way through the fence plate of the exact size to fit the needles. The invention certainly seems to deserve a trial."—Builder, of 29th Sept. 1866.

"They are all lower in price than most of the patent locks in general use. The inventor, Mr. Macdonald, may be seen any day, at the works of the Company, 237 & 239 Euston Road, and he is always willing to explain the mechanism of this surprising lock to any visitor."—The City Press, 10th Nov. 1866.

"We see an advantage in these best locks to gentlemen requiring to be out of doors during the night, as by introducing the latch-key and turning it the converse way, the lock is thrown out of gear effectually, the needles loose, the fence plate capsized, and the bolt seized; immediately on the introduction of the key, and moving it in the direction of the needles, the fence plate starts up, the needles are arranged, and with the greatest precision passed each through its own aperture."—Mechanics' Magazine, 28th Sept., 1866.

"It is a most ingeniously, and, at the same time, a most simply constructed article. It has neither tumblers nor levers, and in its structure borrows little, if anything from previous inventions."—Building News, 5 Oct. 1866.

"The Needle Latch introduced by the Patent Unpickable Lock Co. Limited, is undoubtedly a novelty, and apparently a very secure kind of fastening. The inventor of this ingenious little lock is Mr. Macdonald the manager of the Company."—Ironmonger, 29th Sep. 1866

"We hail with satisfaction a lock which combines security with durability and cheapness. Has the lock on the needle principle all this? We have examined it, and must confess that we are struck by its appearance. The needle-lock involves a principle we have never seen employed in locks; we have seen tumblers and levers, tumblers with springs, and levers with springs, but the needle requires no springs, it is tumbler, lever, & springs all in one. The latches are novel, good, and cheap, and we wish the Patent Unpickable Lock Company every success in their undertaking."—The Artizan, Nov. 1866.

"A lock called the 'Needle Lock' has been recently patented, and it presents several points of novelty and interest. Unlike levers which have an up and down movement, and always move to a point direct to the lever stump, the needles move obliquely, perpendicularly, laterally, or in any direction, hence the difficulty in raising all the needles simultaneously. We may add that the price at which these locks are sold is very moderate."—Builders' Weekly Reporter, 8th Oct. 1866.
